"FOUND": TALE OF A LONG QUEST AND ITS END : By Royce Brier

Fate With Never Flagging Steps Pursued and the Fugitive, All Unconscious of Being a Fugitive, Went His Way Until His Hour Struck; the Chase Was Over and the Score Settled

THE boy drawn in the line of the old army stood for a long moment gazing at the interior of the La Salle street station, as one might look fondly on the scenes of a childhood home.

He was a tall boy, and clean of limb, but he was distressingly emaciated. Blue veins stood out on his hands as on the hands of an old lady, and his face was pasty white, except for a highly flushed spot at the point of each cheekbone. In his gray eyes burned the fires of fever.

Despite all this, ecstasy was evident on the boy's countenance.

Chicago!

At length he hailed a cab, and discounting the plodding leisure of the horse-drawn vehicles of those days, was soon uptown. There, while he awaited a trolley car, the same warm ecstasy gripped his heart. The hurrying thousands of State street wrapped him in the lure of his city. Eagerly he watched for his car, the same car that had countless times whirled him from the downtown office to his home.

Home!

How he counted the streets—streets that he knew by heart. And each block seemed a mile, each quarter of an hour an era. The old conductor was gone from the car.

"I understand he died in Cuba," said the new conductor to the boy's query. "San Juan."

"I almost died in Cuba," returned the boy with a wan smile. "But not San Juan—malaria."

"These Lake Michigan breezes and house cookin' 'll fix you up," said the other in kindly sympathy.

Through the gathering dusk of the early evening the boy walked slowly up his front walk. The combination of rheumatic pains and excitement almost prevented his getting up the front steps of the tiny porch. The house was dark, but that was not unusual. The front door was locked, but no one had known of his home-coming. With a key he admitted himself. The house was cold.

Suddenly an impalpable sense of things amiss swept over him like a chill. He remembered that there had been newspapers on the front porch. He stepped into the living-room of his home. Dust was deep on the little imitation-oak center table. In the center of the table lay a note. The boy held a match to the gas light.

He looked at the lavender note-paper for a long time. Doubtless he read the note a score of times. He stood moveless, his face untouched by any emotion. The same high flush burned at the points of his cheekbones. The same fires of fever burned in his gray eyes.

And then the boy suddenly dropped into an old haircloth chair which stood beside the table. He bent over the table, laying his head on his arms, the lavender note fallen from nerveless, outstretched fingers. For hours he did not stir under the cold, white flame of the gaslight, nor did he make a sound.

THE man was sitting in the palm court of the hotel, partaking of a late dinner.

In strange dissimilarity to the shabby little room of the past was the glittering palm court. Instead of imitation oak, black brown mahogany; instead of haircloth, blue tapestry cushions, sensuous in their deepness; instead of a wan gas flame, vast chandeliers, bedazzling with their myriad electrics. All of this in a score of years.

The man was one to be distinguished in any gathering of men. Standing, he would have been tall, and without moving there clung about him the air of litheness of a beast of prey. His hair was white, though perhaps prematurely so, for he appeared not above forty years of age. His face was lean and gray, his lips thin and straight, bespeaking an unshakable will. But his eyes—they were the glittering cold eyes of the panther, and in them lived a remorseless something which could hardly be stated, much less can it be described.

Twice the man answered the disguising voice of a bellboy, calling his name: "Mr. Hobart—Mr. Hobart—Mr. John Hobart!"

When the man answered his voice was strange by contrast, a cold, leashed thing, minding of the cort clink of steel on steel.

At length John Hobart arose and left the palm court. Summoning a taxicab, he was whirled downtown, and alighted on a crowded corner. Then he made his way west, walking swiftly, block by block, coming into a meaner portion of the city.

Finally reaching a dingy house choked between two other dingy houses, John Hobart entered and mounted a dark stairway. The odor of cooking food hung in the air with the oppressiveness of an anesthetic.

With a key that rattled ominously in the lock, the man admitted himself to a shoddy little room, papered hideously, and lighted by the sickly flame of a gas-jet.

In a few moments the man had changed his dress suit for clothing of uncertain cut and color. A soft felt hat covered his eyes without seeming to do so. From the top drawer of a bureau he took an automatic, a jimmy, and a black silk handkerchief.

Gaining the street, he walked swiftly in the direction of downtown. A mist had swept up from the waters of the bay. The man passed many with waters buttoned close about their throats. Long shafts of light from motor headlights swung to and fro in the shrouded streets. Far out over the city was the dull orange glow of reflected light. Somewhere a clock chimed nine times.

The man arrived in a busy part of the city; in fact, he was but three blocks distant from the hotel where an hour before he had sat in the quiet of the great palm court and taken a late dinner.

John Hobart stood on a curb for some time, gazing at the huge building on the opposite side of the street. In the far corner of the building was a light—and the man frowned. But obstacles, to John Hobart, were but incentives to the overcoming, and the light in the window of the huge building did not long deter him.

He walked along the side of the building, then without so much as a glance behind him turned into a dark alley. With the agility of an acrobat he swung up on the fire escape, and scaling it, reached the fourth floor.

It was but a matter of minutes until he had pried open a fire door. From the edge of the fire escape he peered for a moment into the gloomy abyss of the alley; then he was engulfed in the blackness of the big building.

The place that the man purposed to rob was the Mammoth Department Store. Along one end of the fourth floor was a glass partition, shutting off the general offices. Behind that glass partition there was a safe which John Hobart knew contained money.

Now, John Hobart was no small criminal, and it boots little where he gained the knowledge that the safe held treasure. Suffice it to say that such knowledge on his part reasonably argued its truth.

The light in one of the general offices John Hobart liked not at all, for in certain circumstances it might perforce mean delay, and the burglar knew full well that the "bulls and dicks" have sharper eye at two in the morning than they do when the theatre crowds of ten and eleven flood the city's streets.

Noiselessly John Hobart slipped between the ghostly counters, pausing now and again as though to listen. Suddenly he melted into a shadow, swallowed completely. From half a block away on the first floor there came to him the sound of a closing door.

John Hobart crouched in the blackness beside a counter. Soon he heard the creaking stairs under heavy footsteps, then the hollow echo of those steps scarce a rod from him. Almost he could reach out and touch the intruder, a big man who walked stealthily down the main aisle approaching the general offices.

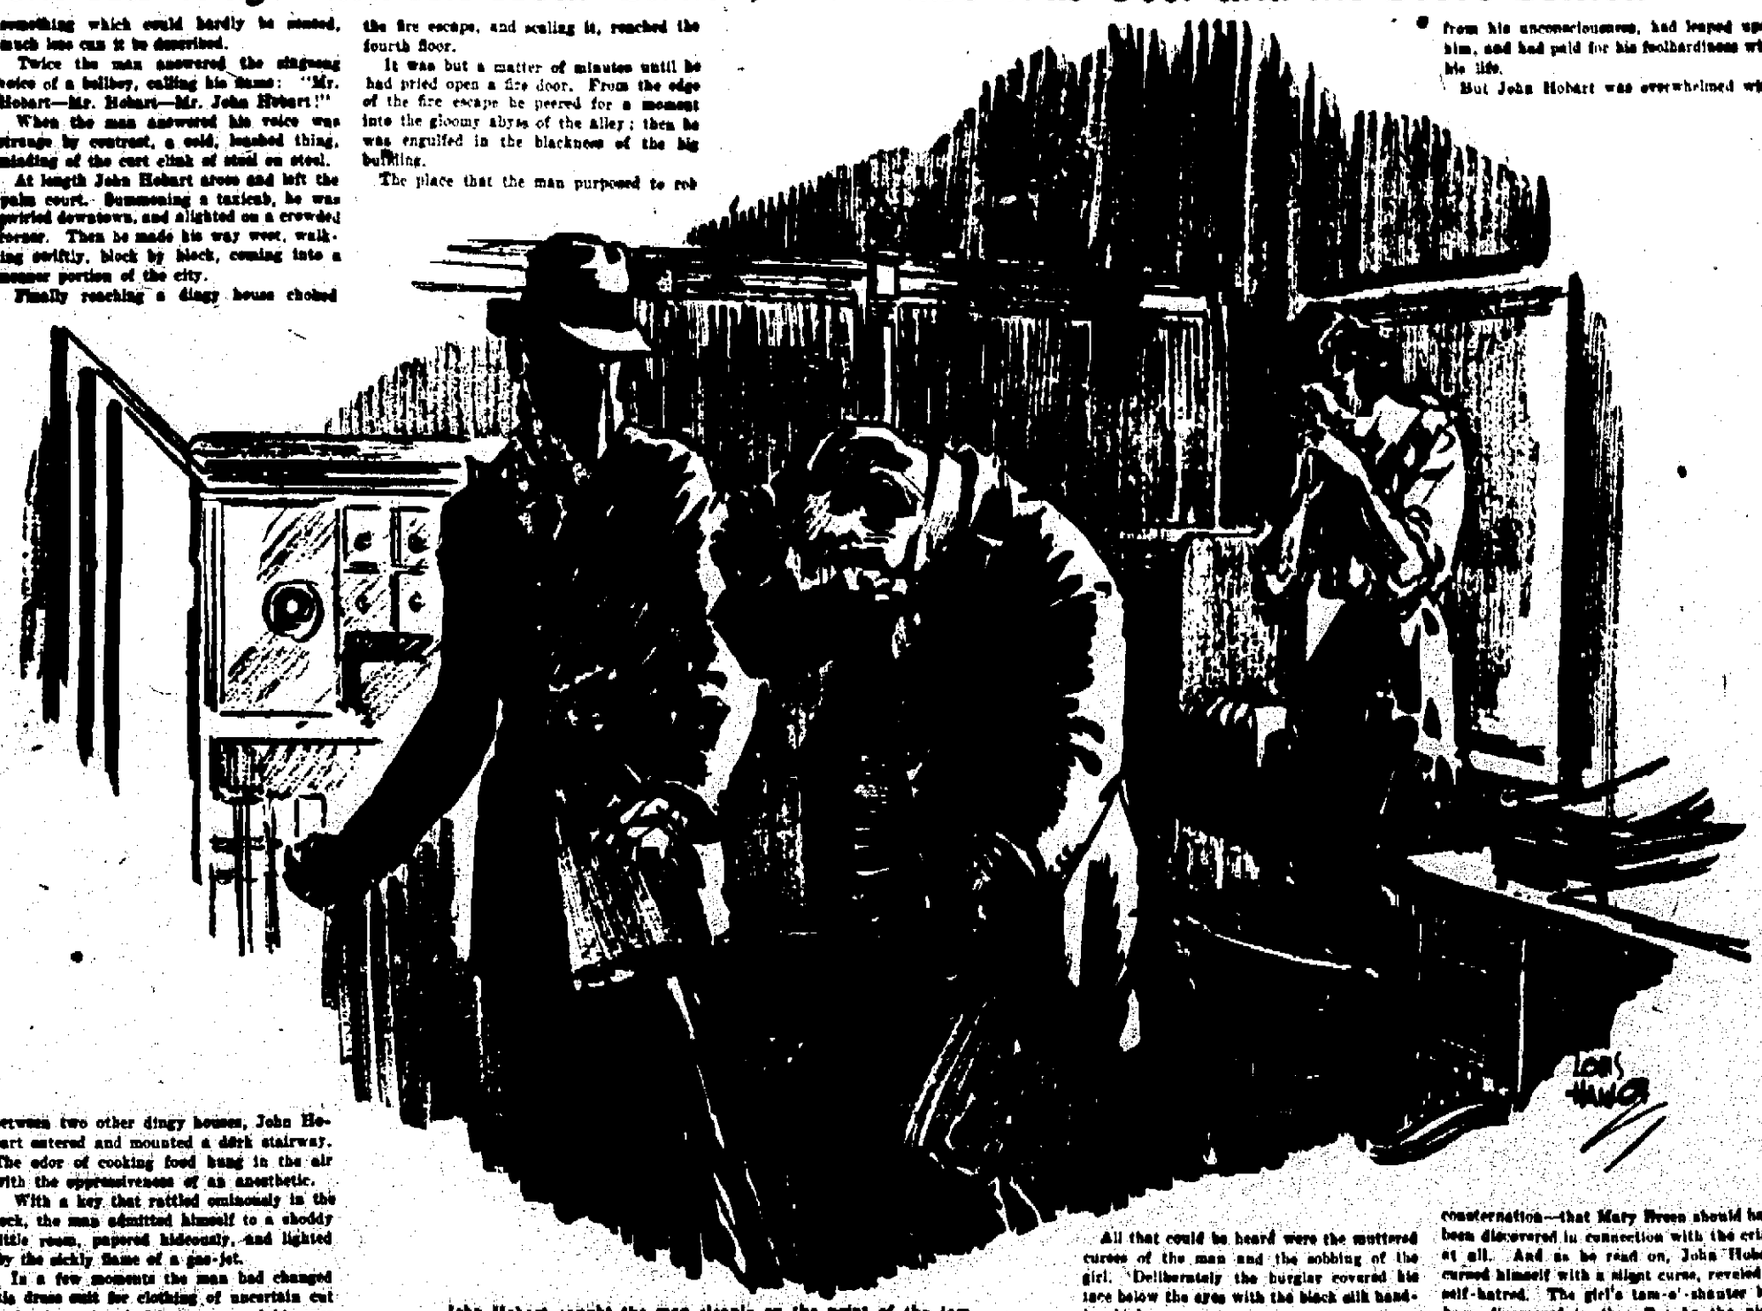
John Hobart continued his silent march toward the glass partition. Rounding a high stock shelf he came upon a strange scene. It was a scene such as one may encounter daily at the movies, and in actual life not at all.

FACING one another across a massive oaken table stood a man and a girl. The burglar could only judge the man from the pumpkinlike head which rested upon his shoulders, and the glint of a diamond from his pudgy fingers. The girl was facing in the direction of the burglar, and he saw that the beauty of her face was distorted by a look of abject terror.

John Hobart listened intently.

"——Night watchman—sent home—back for three hours—don't be a fool——"

Suddenly the burglar saw the girl make a quick movement, as though to reach the door, but the man seized her in his arms. She struggled futilely, like a spent bird battling a gale.



John Hobart caught the man cleanly on the point of the jaw

All that could be heard were the muttered curses of the man and the sobbing of the girl. Deliberately the burglar covered his face below the eyes with the black silk handkerchief.

"Open the door!" commanded John Hobart, abruptly, and in a cold and level voice.

A key grated in the lock.

Again came the cold, calculating voice of the burglar, incisive, brooking no defiance.

"Go stand against the dull light of that alley window—the woman, too!"

A large dark form and a smaller one were etched against the light of the designated window. With a lightning movement the burglar was within the glass partition. There was no sound save heavy breathing.

John Hobart's voice cut the gloom, and he was not prolix in his warning.

"Don't move—don't make a mistake."

Utilizing a pencil flash lamp, which gave off but a dim, circular glow of light, the burglar set at work on the safe. Scarce had he worked a dozen seconds when the girl commenced afresh to sob.

"Here! Lay off that!" John Hobart snarled, whirling round in the gloom and taking a step toward the window where the two stood. "This ain't a vaudeville skit."

The girl did not cease sobbing.

"You little devil, you! I can't hear those bolts. I'll take you out of here when I go if you'll shut up."

At that the girl quieted, and the burglar continued his labors for half of an hour. The big doors swung open.

It was the swinging open of the big doors that caused the man silhouetted against the light of the alley window to make a false move. John Hobart caught the man cleanly on the point of the jaw, and he collapsed like a punctured toy balloon. The burglar said not a word, but rifled the safe. Then he swung the doors shut and looked about him.

"C'm'on," he said finally to the girl.

Together they made their way between the high-piled counters. Reaching the ground floor, the burglar jimmied open a fire door at the far end of the alley from the one where he had entered.

The girl was amazed at the abrupt change in the burglar's mood and his mode of speech.

"My dear young lady," he said, "it was indeed thoughtful of your employer—I take it that he is your employer—to send the night watchman out to his home. Should you see the gentleman tomorrow—though you doubtless will not after this evening's experience—convey to him, if you please, my gratitude."

As the door swung open the burglar's voice became one of harsh, cold irony.

"I would advise," he said, "that you refrain from acquainting the first policeman you encounter with the fact that there is some one in the building."

"Oh! After you helped me escape that—that—"

John Hobart shut the door on her words and returned to the office on the fourth floor. A few minutes later he was on the street.

A dense fog smothered the city.

JAMES BARRETT MURDERED IN HIS OFFICE

Night Watchman Discovers Body of Mammoth Store Superintendent — His Private Secretary Held—Admits Being in Store, But Denies Knowledge of Crime

John Hobart's consternation lay not in the printed knowledge that James Barrett was dead. He himself had done away with the merchant in much the same spirit that one might do away with a rattlesnake. Discounting the fact that the burglar was a trespasser and the merchant not, there had been some slight excuse. Upon the burglar's returning to the office the merchant, came from his unconsciousness, had leaped upon him, and had paid for his foolhardiness with his life.

But John Hobart was overwhelmed with consternation—that Mary Brown should have been discovered in connection with the crime at all. And as he read on, John Hobart cursed himself with a silent curse, reveled in self-hatred. The girl's tam-o'-shanter had been discovered in the office by the night watchman.

He, John Hobart, to whom the most inconsiderable detail had ever loomed large, whose work had heretofore been free from any flaw—he had been guilty of an oversight worthy of the rawest amateur. Beyond measure he was disgusted with himself.

Of course, he could do nothing for the girl. It was unfortunate. It was one of those untoward incidents of life which are regrettable but irreparable, such as the running down of a little child with a motorcar.

IT WAS but natural that John Hobart should attend the trial of Mary Brown. But make no mistake. He was not "drawn" to the trial as are some criminals in like circumstance. There was nothing of the craven in John Hobart's nature. Moreover, his confidence in self amounted to a mania, and he had no slightest fear of detection. He was interested in the fate of Mary Brown, and he attended her trial. That was all.

From the first he was aware that there was no hope for the girl. The circumstantial evidence was overwhelming. There was her tam-o'-shanter. She had been absent from her boarding house, and had returned later in the evening in a state of great agitation.

There was but one thing which, in the light of what John Hobart knew of the crime, might save her—the presence of a burglar on the night of the murder. But apprehending the burglar was another matter altogether, and John Hobart smiled at the absurdity of the thought.

ON THE third day of the trial John Hobart took a seat in the front row. Through impersonal eyes he gazed on the mental suffering of the girl as she went through a cross-examination. Without question he saw her collapse at its end.

Shortly the counsel for the defense spoke:

"Your Honor, and Gentlemen of the Jury: A peculiar fact has arisen in connection with this crime, establishing a point which cannot but have effect upon your verdict."

John Hobart knew that the moment had come, and he gloried in the sensation which was about to occur—the murmur that would go through the audience—the tumult as the spectators arose to their feet.

"It matters not," went on the counsel for the defense, "in what manner I gained the knowledge I am about to impart to you. I will produce the evidence of its truth."

There was the absolute quietude of expectancy in the courtroom.

"I propose to prove to you, gentlemen of the jury, that this James Barrett, this man of unblemished repute, this man of high place, was once guilty of one of the most despicable crimes of which—"

"I object! Your honor, I object!" This from the prosecuting attorney.

"Objections overruled," growled the magistrate.

The bare trace of the shadow of a smile touched the lips of John Hobart.

"I propose to prove to you that James Barrett, through the honeyed sweetness of his words a score of years ago, stole the wife of a young man, a malaria-stricken soldier in Cuba, gone to succor the weak, gone to fight for his country—"

His words trailed off, lost in the cry of another. A terrible figure had arisen from a front seat. The spectators stood aghast.

"I did it!" screamed John Hobart. "I killed James Barrett. I was the soldier in Cuba. I'm glad I killed him. God! I'm glad!"

Abruptly John Hobart slouched into his seat.

Angela and I—The Widow's Dress—By George A. Birmingham

ANGELA looked up from the paper she was reading.

"How sad!" she said. "How very, very sad!"

There are often sad things, very sad things, in newspapers; but I did not see how Angela could have come on one of them. She was studying the column devoted to the sale of second-hand clothes. I knew this because she had just directed my attention to an opportunity of buying a pair of boots which the owner had "scarcely worn."

"Listen to this," she said. "For sale. Cheap! A black dress, widow's, crape, good as new."

"I don't see anything sad about that," I said. "The lady has evidently counseled herself unusually quick. I don't suppose the first one minds now. The second and the lady herself are presumably pleased. Where does the sadness come in?"

"Tom," she said, "you're a heartless beast. I don't know how you can think such things. No woman would marry again so soon. She says the dress is as good as new. That means that she can't have worn it more than once or three times."

"If she isn't marrying again," I said, "why is she selling off her mourning?"

Angela looked at me with reproachful eyes. There were very nearly tears in them.

"The poor thing has evidently died," she said, "soon after the death of her husband."

"Of grief?"

"Of a broken heart," said Angela. "I should, too, Tom, if you died: and then some one would have to sell off my clothes."

I appreciate Angela's affectionate nature, and I thought it nice of her to say that she would not survive me long. But I did not accept her theory about the second-hand widow's dress.

"You may be right," I said, "but I am much more inclined to think that woman is a heartless minx."

"I'm perfectly certain," said Angela, "that she's nothing of the sort, and that what I say is true. The poor thing has died, faded away. She was probably quite young."

We argued for some time and then agreed to have a bet on the subject. If I turned out to be right Angela was to buy me the second-hand boots. If Angela was right I should purchase the widow's dress for her. It would, I hoped, be of no more use than the boots were likely to be to me. We wrote at once to the address given in the advertisement, making inquiries about the dress. We received a prompt and courteous reply from Messrs. Doule & Co., the well-known dressmakers who have made a reputation as specialists in mourning. They said that the dress was on view in their saleerooms, that alteration to secure a fit could easily be made and that the price asked was exceedingly moderate. They gave no hint about the original owner of the dress; but they warmly invited Angela to go and see it. I agreed to go with her.

The young lady who displayed it was very genial and pleasant

The dress, so Angela said, was a really nice one. I am no hand at descriptions of clothes and all that I can say about it is that it was quite black, which, of course, was to be expected. The young lady who displayed it was very grand and haughty, so grand that Angela was afraid to ask her to tell the history of the dress. I wanted to have our bet decided as I ventured to make the necessary inquiry.

"By the way," I said, in a casual tone, "how do you come to have a second-hand widow's dress? Seems an odd thing to be selling, doesn't it?"

The young lady snubbed me very severely indeed.

"We don't deal in second-hand clothes," she said with a nasty sneer at me.

I did not dare to say another word. Angela failed to back me up in any way. Fortunately the young lady volunteered a certain amount of information, though she ignored me when giving it.

"This gown, madam," she said, "was made for a customer of ours but turned out to be a misfit. It could not be altered because the lady's figure was somewhat unusual. That's why we are disposing of it."

We left the shop, promising to write about the dress when we had duly considered the matter. On the way home I reminded Angela that she would have to buy the boots for me.

"The widow didn't die of grief," I said, "so you've lost the bet."

"I've won it," said Angela. "You said she was a heartless minx, and she evidently isn't."

"She is," I said. "If she wasn't perfectly heartless she wouldn't have been so particular about the fit of a dress immediately after her poor husband's death."

"You're quite wrong," said Angela. "Any woman who really cared for her husband would insist on getting the very best dress she could out of respect for his memory. If she hadn't loved him she might have put up with a dress that didn't fit. That's how I should feel anyway if you died. I should want to show my affection for you and so I should be most frightfully particular about what I wore. Far more than if you were alive."

The matter remained undecided. Perhaps some day we shall meet that widow and find out what her feelings really are.

JUBILANT IN COURT TODAY

Weaver and Felsch Are Happy Over Court Ruling.

COURT FINDS MEN ARE NOT INVOLVED

In Conspiracy To "Throw" the World's Series Games.

Weaver Thinks He Will Be Restored to Former Standing in Baseball—Future Is Now Up to Judge Landis.

Chicago, July 28.—The baseball scandal case will be in the hands of the jury within twenty-four hours, it was indicated, today, by attorneys for the remaining Black Sox and the one gambler involved in the throwing of the 1919 World's series.

Are Jubilant.

Chicago, July 28.—Although technically still listed among the defendants in the famous "Black Sox" scandal case of the 1919 World's series, George "Buck" Weaver and Oscar "Happy" Felsch, are virtually free, today, of charges that they participated in the plot to throw the series. Judge Hugo M. Friend has made it plain that he will not countenance a verdict of "guilty" against these players.

Weaver and Felsch were openly jubilant when court reconvened, this morning. The smiling "Buck" confidently predicted he would be playing again with the White Sox within a few weeks.

Whether or not Weavnr and Felsch will be restored to good standing in organized baseball, however, depends on the action of K. M. Landis, arbiter of baseball affairs. Judge Landis has given no indication of what his attitude toward the players will be.

William L. Veeck, president of the Cubs, was the only baseball official who would comment on the case. Veeck said:

"Whether they play ball again is something for Judge Landis to decide. But they can't play ball for the Cubs. We do not want them."

Besides Weaver and Felsch, Judge Friend also indicated that no conclusive evidence involving Carl Zork, of St. Louis, one of the alleged gamblers in the pool, had been introduced and that he also would free Zork, should the jury return a verdict against him. It is expected that Judge Friend's instructions to the jury on this point would be positive.

Attorneys for the defense, today, planned to produce evidence intended to prove that it would have been impossible for the players accused to have "thrown" the series. The main effort of the defense will be to show that the series was played honestly.

Detectives are less than 100 miles behind him in the spectacular chase.

Spurgin is charged with embezzlement of $1,500,000.

LEGISLATIVE PLANS PUBLIC

Administration Program of Next Few Weeks Outlined.

TAX MEASURE GETS THE RIGHT-OF-WAY

Several Senate Bills Slated for Passage Before Recess Planned for Next Month.

Washington, July 28.—Legislative programs for the next few weeks in the senate and house were fairly well outlined as a result of conferences between President Harding and a number of Republican senators here.

Administration plans, as disclosed by senators, call for passage by the house of the internal revenue revision bill and of several senate bills by Aug. 6, with a view to recess of congress soon after until late in September or early in October.

Probably the most important feature of the program disclosed was the president's desire to have the tax bill enacted ahead of the Fordney tariff revision measure. Senator leaders plan to hold the tariff bill in the finance committee until after the tax measure is put through.

The program was said to leave the tariff subject to indefinite delay, possibly until the winter session of congress, although some senate leaders reiterated that it would be enacted before adjournment of the present extra session.

Other prominent features of the reported program propose delay on the administration bills for refunding allied loan and for funding railroad debts.

Senate bills slated for passage before the proposed recess are the pending agricultural credits measure, the Willis-Campbell anti-beer bill, the Sapper-Tincher measure to regulate future trading in grain and, possibly, the Borah bill to restore free tolls to American coastwise vessels using the Panama canal.

The distribution provides that the county shall receive $1,717.93, Caledonia, $102; Green Camp, $44.50; LaRue, $162.70; Marion, $6,243.52; Morral, $98.50; Prospect, $180.35, and Waldo, $90.

A special purchase enables Uhler-Phillips to make you a special price on peaches.—Adv. 1-c.

Club Is Robbed.

San Francisco, California, July 28.—Six unmasked bandits entered the Colonial club, early today and at the point of revolvers held up twelve members of the club and robbed them of money and jewels amounting to $3,000. After the clubmen had been searched by one of the holdup men, they were compelled to lay face downward on the floor while the bandits escaped in an automobile.

Taken From Train.

Pittsburgh, July 28.—The four members of the Australian Davis-cup tennis team scheduled to arrive here this morning from Toronto, were taken off the train at Black Rock, a Buffalo suburb, because they did not have passports to enter this country. Word received here says the Australians are being detained in Buffalo until the passports question is settled.

Steals Snow Brooms.

HEAVY LOSSES ARE SUFFERED

Spaniards Hit Hard in Native Uprising in Morocco.

TRIBESMEN FIGHT WAY TO COAST

Artillery Fire of Moors Makes Landing of Spanish Reinforcements Difficult.

Paris, July 28.—The native uprising against the Spaniards in Morocco has become general throughout the mineral and agricultural district of Kurt, according to a despatch received here today.

The Spaniards are said to have suffered heavy losses.

Following the capture of Marchiva, the tribesmen fought their way to the coast and established positions on Cape Agua.

The landing of Spanish reinforcements at Melilla has been rendered perilous by the artillery fire of the Moors. The insurgents are not molesting the inhabitants.

The French government has taken precautionary measures to guard against an uprising in French Morocco. Outposts on the Spanish-French line, in Morocco, have been recalled for fear they would be attacked by overwhelming numbers of natives and massacred.

Heavy Fighting.

Madrid, July 28.—Heavy fighting continues along some parts of the Moroccan battle front, but the Spaniards are gaining the upper hand over the rebellious natives and are restoring order as rapidly as possible, according to official advices to the war ministry. In the Melilla district the Spaniards made a sortie and occupied Mount Asalayn. Communication was established with forces in that region that had been encircled by the tribesmen. Navor Sididris has been abandoned by the Spaniards, part of the garrison embarking upon a battleship. The remainder fell into the hands of the natives. Both sides sustained heavy losses in the fighting around Navor Sididris.

NAB ITALIAN WHO CAUSED ARREST OF SLAIN VICTIM

Police To Give Mike Capriglione Third Degree.

SEARCH OF HIS HOME REVEALS NO WEAPONS

Capriglione Had Filed Affidavit Against James Ross for Destroying Fruit Trees.

Mike Capriglione was arrested late Wednesday afternoon and is being held at the city prison on an investigation charge in connection with the murder of James Ross, of Edwards street, Tuesday night.

Capriglione, who resides in the house about twenty feet south of the Ross home, filed an affidavit against Ross, last Saturday, charging him with destroying fruit trees of the value of $10.

Following a hearing in the mayor's court, Ross was dismissed for want of evidence. Wednesday afternoon the police searched the home of Capriglione, but failed to find any revolvers or pistols. Of the nine shells found near the spot where Ross was first attacked, at the rear entrance to his yard, three were from a thirty-two caliber and six from a .380 special, a steel-jacket bullet from each size being recovered.

Capriglione will be "sweated" later today in an effort to get some information from him.

A CONFERENCE AT WHITE HOUSE TODAY

Washington, July 28.—There was a most important journalistic conference at the White House, today:

President Harding, owner of The Marion Star, and Lord Northcliffe, owner of sundry British newspapers, were closeted for more than an hour and twenty minutes.

"We talked newspapers," said Lord Northcliffe at the conclusion of the conference. "Just newspapers," he insisted when pressed by the White House correspondents, who have ideas of their own.

"Your president knows all about newspapers. He agreed with me that the hour of going to press is the most interesting hour in a man's life. His Marion Star was on his desk. I examined it. It is a most excellent newspaper.

"You have a very handsome and dignified president."

Northcliffe turned to depart, when someone fired a question about the armament-limitation conference.

"See here, young man, I know this game. I have been in it for years. You can't draw me out," said the British peer. "I have been in Washington before. I know the things to discuss."

POISON-PEN WIELDER'S CURIOSITY HIS UNDOING

A Detective Traces Newman Through Cleveland Address.

HIS LETTER ATTACKING WOMAN LEADS TO ARREST

Officer Posed as Horse Buyer at Hotel Until He Secured Suspect's Confidence.

Curiosity on the part of William A. Newman, night clerk at the Hotel Marion and confessed author of a series of "poison-pen" letters, to learn the effects of one of his communications addressed to a prominent Wabash, Indiana, business man, led to Newman's apprehension by Harry P. McKee, Chicago, special representative of the Burns Detective agency.

According to the detective Newman read in a Wabash paper an item stating the wife of a prominent Wabash business man was visiting in Cleveland. A short time after this woman had returned to her home in Wabash, her husband received a letter supposedly from a Cleveland woman. Charges of improper conduct against the wife were made in this letter, which also contained a request that the husband attempt to return to the writer a diamond ring his wife was charged with appropriating from the husband of the pseudo-writer.

"Woman" in Marion.

Most of the letters written by Newman, prior to the dispatch of this one, were anonymous. After working on the case for several months, detectives secured this letter and started tracing it to its source. Their search first led to a Cleveland hotel, the address given in the letter written to the Wabash man. Inquiry there resulted in the discovery that a forwarding address had been left by the Cleveland "woman." This address was Marion.

McKee then came to Marion and first set about to learn the names of former residents of Wabash who are residing here. He secured three names and by process of elimination decided to look up Newman's record in Wabash. This led to the discovery of the interest Newman had in the hotel conducted by his sister in Wabash.

Poses as Horse Buyer.

The detective then engaged a room at the Hotel Marion, posing as a horse buyer. He gradually gained the confidence of Newman until the suspect finally showed him the suitcase files, told him of his fancied wrongs and one evening, when the detective stated he was going to Chicago, Newman gave him three letters, addressed to Wabash people, to mail for him in Chicago.

Notification of the Wabash authorities, issuance of the warrants and Newman's arrest followed.

W. D. "Deck" Hazen expects to leave this evening for Chicago, where he will visit Curtis Walker, center fielder with Philadelphia Nationals, playing in Chicago this week.

MOUNTAINEERS MAKE SEARCH

Seeking Body of Late Purdue University Head.

THRILLING STORY IS DEVELOPED

Dr. Stone First To Fall and Wife Bravely Goes to Rescue—His Body in Unknown Crevice.

Banff, Alberta, July 28.—Mrs. W. E. Stone, wife of the president of Purdue university, LaFayette, Indiana, who lost his life while climbing in the Canadian Rockies, is recovering, today, from the effects of exposure and lack of food endured while she awaited the arrival of rescuers. At present, Mrs. Stone is under care of a nurse in a camp on Marshal creek, but it is expected she will be brought to Banff in a few days.

Guides and parties of mountaineers are continuing the search for the body of Dr. Stone which, contrary to previous reports, is not at the bottom of a crevice, but is somewhere near the foot of Rock Chimney, a towering ledge of rock on the slope of Mount Eanon.

Details of the tragedy brought here by a number of the party that rescued Mrs Stone, threw new light on the accident and after some of the circumstances described in the earlier report, Dr. and Mrs. Stone had almost reached the top of Mount Eanon when they encountered Rock Chimney.

Dr. Stone was above his wife, unroped, while Mrs. Stone was roped to a rock. He was testing the rock above him when the rock on which he was standing gave way and he hurtled over his wife and fell far down the mountain to a spot difficult of access.

Mrs. Stone lowered herself as far as possible by means of a rope, but could not reach her husband. She attempted to leap to another ledge but fell into a crevice and was marooned there five days without food.

The only water she had was from a small stream which trickled down the mountain side during the day when the snows melted.

Mrs. Stone was carried nine miles on a stretcher, after being rescued from her perilous perch on the mountain ledge. She was so weakened by exposure and lack of nourishment that she could hardly stand.

SCORES OF PERSONS ARE INJURED TODAY

Two Elevated Trains Catch Fire in New York.

New York, July 28.—Scores of persons received minor injuries, early today, in a panic resulting from two city-bound elevated trains catching fire at the Brooklyn end of Manhattan bridge. Police reserves had to be called out to preserve order.

The trains were coming into the city from Coney Island and were heavily laden. An explosion underneath one of the cars of the first train filled it with choking, black smoke. The lights went out and in the confusion women became panicky and began smashing the windows to get out.

The second train, meanwhile, was endeavoring to push the smoking cars from the right of way and a short circuit resulted in a second fire.

There were no serious casualities, according to reports to the police. It was several hours before quiet could be restored and traffic resumed.

WHOLESALE THEFTS OF AUTOMBILES

Result in Insurance Rates Jumping in Akron.

Akron, July 28.—Judge H. C. Spicer took the first steps here, today, to break up the wholesale thefts of motor cars which has resulted in insurance rates leaping 100 per cent, and more within the past few months.

"Automobile thieves ought to be adequately punished," said the court in sentencing prisoners guilty to charges of automobile stealing. "It is difficult for owners to procure insurance against theft, due to the great number of cars stolen. Insurance rates are excessive and the stealing of cars must be discouraged," continued the court, as he imposed prison sentences.

JACOB BECK MAKES RECORD IN AKRON

Presents Some Surprising Figures in Suit for Damages.

Akron, July 28.—Jacob Beck has all the income tax officers beaten by a block when it comes to juggling figures. Beck filed suit against Morris Sarbinsky, today, asking $5,000.

KIWANIS CUT NOON LUNCHES IN AUGUST

This is Unanimously Decided at Meeting Today.

PICNIC AT GARFIELD PARK FOR AUGUST 10

Advertising Club Challenge for Baseball Game Is Accepted. Invitation from Kenton.

No noon luncheon will be held by the Marion Kiwanis club during August, according to a vote of the membership at the noon luncheon today at the Busy Bee cafeteria. The motion was made by George Whysall and carried by a large majority.

On account of the Masonic picnic at Garfield park next Wednesday the entertainment committee decided not to accept the invitation to picnic at the Y. M. C. A. camp at Hepburn next Wednesday. It was suggested that the picnic be held at Hepburn August 10, but it developed that there would be no boys in camp there on that date. The matter of a picnic was referred to the picnic committee, which later reported that a picnic will be held at Garfield park August 10 for Kiwanians and their families. A baseball game between Kiwanis and Advertising club teams will feature the picnic. L. L. Montel was named chairman of an entertainment committee for the picnic and it was announced that a picnic lunch will be served.

Potter Craftsman.

Walter E. Hane, newly-elected commander of the American Legion, thanked the club for its cooperation in the Legion's Independence day celebration. George Whysall introduced as his guest, Smith Damron, the potter craftsman, who appeared at the Chautauqua Wednesday evening.

An invitation from the Kenton club to attend its charter presentation August 4 was read and twenty-eight members signified their attention of attending. A challenge from the Advertising club for a baseball game was accepted and John H. Clark was named to have charge of the Kiwanis team.

B. T. Wiant and Dr. Ray Miller were elected delegates and Frank C. Gegenheimer and G. W. Jakeway alternates to the district convention to be held at Lima September 27 and 28.

Mayor T. E. Andrews was re-elected district trustee. In connection with the announcement of the district convention, it was stated that conferences for trustees, presidents and secretaries will be held at Lima September 28.

POLICE

Half-Breed Suspected.

E. M. Porter, residing on the Campbell road, reported to the police Wednesday evening that a pair of trousers, silk shirt, pair of shoes, some socks, collars, pair of cuff buttons, and seventy-five cents had been stolen from his home. Porter gave the police a description of a part Indian who worked for him several days and whom he took as far as the railroads late in the afternoon. On his return home he discovered the theft.

Another Bike Is Stolen.

Joseph Pickett reported to the police Wednesday afternoon the theft of his Dayton bicycle from the corner of Center and Davids streets. He gave the officers a description of the wheel and the name of the party he suspected of the theft.

One Lone Illegal Trainrider.

A colored fellow, giving his home as Alabama, was arrested Wednesday evening by an officer of the Erie on a charge of illegal trainriding. He pleaded guilty before the mayor and was turned over to the service director to work for the city.

A Happy Decision.

Market Opening.

New York, July 28.—Pressed Steel Car was a weak feature in the early trading on the stock exchange, today, falling 7 3-4 points to 55, as the result of the passing of the dividend. The market generally displayed irregularity.

CONTRACTS FOR HIGHWAY WORK

Herrick Signs Forty-Three Contracts Today.

AWARDS APPROVED BY STATE CABINET

Bids on Four Road Projects Are Rejected and Six Held Up—A Fight Against Improvements.

Columbus, July 28.—Director of Highways Leon C. Herrick is, today, placing his official signature on forty-three contracts for highway improvement scattered throughout the state, after the proposals had received the approval of Governor Davis' cabinet at a meeting lasting until late in the day, yesterday. Bids on four projects were rejected, and six others were held up pending further investigations.

Bids on the following projects were rejected as being too high:

Jefferson county, 1.06 miles, Steubenville-Cambridge road, brick construction; Putnam county, 2.95 miles of the Van Wert-Ottawa road, Kentucky rock asphalt; Wayne county, 1.42 miles of the Millersburg-Wooster road, brick or concrete, and Jefferson county, 4.02 miles of the Canton-Steubenville road, bituminous macadam.

The six projects upon which a final determination was not reached, were these: Springfield-Jamestown road, seven miles; Mansfield-Millersburg road, two miles; Mt. Vernon-Newark road, three miles; Woodsfield-Statersville road, two miles; Findlay-Tiffin road, one mile and one mile of the Bowling Green-Port Clinton road.

In all other instances the contracts were awarded to the lowest bidder.

Senator Charles Brand, of Urbana, who has been actively engaged in a campaign against road building at present prices, gave out the following letter from Governor McCray, of Indiana:

"We are not letting any new contracts for road construction in this state, but are devoting our attention almost entirely to maintenance. I am advocating a return to the old fashioned gravel and rock road. Indiana abounds in that kind of material. The present difference in cost between the ordinary gravel or rock roads and roads of concrete construction is so great that the interest alone on the two kinds of construction makes a burdensome overhead charge which must be avoided or the country will reach a point almost approaching bankruptcy."

Those Successful.

Among the successful bidders announced today by Director Herrick, are the following:

F. J. Mann & Sons, Ashland, 1.185 miles of brick road, Ashland county; John F. Conner, Cleveland, grading and bridges, Ashland county.

Gray Brothers, Youngstown, .915 mile brick road, Coshocton county.

E. A. Freshwater, Painesville, brick road, Crawford county.

John L. Edwards, Sunbury, 1.1756 miles macadam, Delaware county.

Bennett & Brumm, Celina, bridge, Logan county.

Highway Construction company, Elyria, .265 miles brick road near Oberlin, Lorain county.

Kane Brothers, Youngstown, 3.756 miles macadam, Harrison county.

Elyria Construction company, Elyria, 1.15 miles brick, Lorain county.

E. A. Freshwater, Painesville, .589 miles brick road, Tuscarawas county.

Allison Harris, East Liverpool, culvert, Columbiana county.

John Herzog, Forest, 2.99 miles macadam, Richland county.

Burd Construction county, Canton, 1.43 miles brick road, Stark county.

PLEADING FOR A FREE JUDICIARY

Coniff Addresses West Virginia Bar Association.

Charleston, West Virginia, July 28.—Pleading for a "free and independent judiciary," John J. Coniff, president of the West Virginia Bar association, in opening the thirty-seventh annual meeting here today, declared that selection of judges by members of the bar on a non-partisan basis is the only way to secure this condition.

"It is the duty of every lawyer to insist upon the selection or appointment of non-partisan judges," he said. "While this is comparatively easy in small communities, it is more difficult in larger cities."

"Reconstruction" Camp.

Washington, July 28.—A "reconstruction" camp for federal prisoners serving their first term is being considered, Attorney General Daugherty said today. Present plans provide for making Camp Sherman, Ohio, into a vocational training institute where federal prisoners may be made into good citizens, capable of earning their livelihood when released from prison, the attorney general said.

PREACH TO WARN AND TEACH MAN IN WISDOM

Father Tells Son When R. LaRue Cober Is Ordained.

ORDINATION CEREMONIES CONDUCTED LAST NIGHT

Trinity Baptist Church Is Scene of Event Which Is Attended by Many.

The council called by the Trinity Baptist church met Wednesday afternoon for the purpose of examining R La Rue Cober with a view of his ordination into the Christian ministry.

Visiting churches sending delegates were Memorial Baptist church, Dayton, Memorial Baptist church, Williamsport, Pennsylvania; Baptist churches at Marietta, Granville and Mt. Gilead Churhes of the Marion association sending delegates were Fite Memorial, Emanuel, LaRue, Green Camp, Radnor, Springdale, Richwood, Morral and Prospect.

After the examination of Mr. Cober the Ladies Aid society served supper to the visiting delegations

Father Officiates.

In the evening the ordination sermon was preached by Mr Cober's father, Rev. A A. Cober, D. D., of Williamsport, Pennsylvania Preceding his sermon, Dr Cober thanked Rev. H T Houf, of Granville, Dr McAfee and the members of Trinity church for their kindness to his son while he was a supply at Trinity church in this city

Taking his text from Colossians 1:28, "Whom we preach, warning every man, and teaching every man in all wisdom; that we may present every man perfect in Christ Jesus," Dr Cober said in part:

"The kingdoms of this world have been ,are being and always will be, I suppose, propagated by legislation, diplomacy and war and a lot of other things that may be named, but the kingdom of God has been, is being and always will be propagated by preaching.

Went Preaching.

"John the Baptist came into the wilderness of Judea preaching and Jesus Christ was a preacher We have heard something about the wailing of the pulpit, that preaching is going out of fashion, at least, lost its influence.

"It may be possible that preaching is not having the effect in some ways that we desire, but I believe that the power of preaching is better, yes, even greater, than it was before. Never have our colleges and seminaries been so well equipped as they are today. We are living in a tremendous age and if a man goes through college and through the seminary and is not a better preacher, then there's something wrong with the man Preaching is a perpetual function of the church

"The field of our preaching, the method of our preaching and the purpose of our preaching, are the three main things to be considered. The Greeks placed a great deal of stress on learning and mental gymnastics, the Romans placed emphasis upon law and the Jews preached law and tradition, but they saw life, human life, as the Greeks and Romans did not see it. They emphasized personality and character. Paul and his associates preached Christ who was the type of the world's noblest ideals. Paul preached Christ and Him crucified. He realized that the world needed more than philosophy.

"The method of our preaching should be to warn and teach every man in wisdom.

Doctrine of Retribution.

"We do not hear much these days on the doctrine of retribution. There is a law of retribution and it is as deep as human nature itself. We recognize it in the physical world also in civil life. Shall we remove the danger signs or shall we recognize that exhortation has gone out of a great deal of our preaching? Christianity is more than an emotion, more than a mere sentiment There is emotion and sentiment in it, but that is not all that it has and Christ was preeminently a preacher as He was a Teacher in a large sense.

"The purpose of our preaching is to accomplish God's purpose in men. But what is God's purpose in men? In Genesis we learn that God made man in His own image after His own likeness Our task is extensive that we may present every man perfect in Christ Jesus and it is intensive that we present every man perfect."

To Young People.

Following Dr. Cober's sermon Rev. J. C. McFarlane, of Dayton gave an inspirational address to the young people of the congregation.

Rev. H. T. Houf, of Granville, followed with the charge to the candidate. The prayer of ordination, and the laying on of hands, was given by Rev. Mr McFarlane and Rev R La Rue Cober, the newly-ordained minister, pronounced the benediction.

Dr. Cober and his son both may go to Central America later on to engage in ministerial work.

THE RAILROADS

Officials of the various divisions of the Erie system have received instructions from the general offices to require all employes who have entered the service since 1918, with the exception of common laborers, to take a physical examination

Some of the shop crafts objected to the order and if they continue in the same frame of mind, it was announced, they will be obliged to leave the service. The company has extended the time of taking the examination from August 1 to August 10. A large number of those required to take the examination have reported to the company surgeons and no serious results are anticipated by the road officials over the action of some of the men

A new crossing was installed this morning at the Hocking Valley and C., D. & M Center street crossing

M. L Welsh, chief dispatcher on the Cincinnati division of the Erie, left today for northern Michigan, where he will spend a two-months vacation.

EXAMINATION REVEALS $13,775.75 DUE COUNTY

This Is Outside the Forry Treasury Shortage.

WHICH IS DEALT WITH IN A SPECIAL REPORT

Bulk Owed County by Townships and Abutting Property Owners on Marion-Waldo Road.

Total findings for the recovery of $16,569 82 are contained in the report of the examination of the county offices, just made public. Of this amount the report states $2,794.07 has been paid, leaving $13,775 75 due the county remaining unpaid.

The examination covers the period from January 1, 1919, to March 31, 1921, and was made by Examiners A. B. Pockinpaugh and John Whitney and Assistant Examiner A. M. Hays. It covers audits of the accounts of the county auditor, children's home, clerk of courts, coroner, county commissioners, county board of education, county board of school examiners, county infirmary, deputy state supervisors of elections, humane society, prosecuting attorney, probate and juvenile courts, sheriff, surveyor, treasurer and treasury. The report covers fifty-seven pages

Special Report Treasury Shortage.

Attention is called to the fact that the treasury shortage was dealt with in a special report submitted April 4, 1921.

The report made public today directs attention to the fact that all banks having inactive accounts pay two and one-fourth per cent., except the Marion Savings bank, which pays three and one-half per cent. "The five banks in the city of Marion," the report states, "have active accounts and, although they advertise to pay four per cent. on savings accounts they bid two per cent. on the county's money, both active and inactive, except the Marion Savings bank, whose bid was three and one-half per cent. for inactive and two per cent. for active. Bids will again be received in September and in view of the fact that the state depositories are paying from five to six per cent on deposits, there should be a decided increase in rates in this county."

The report also directs the attention of the county commissioners "to the fact that depository interest is not promptly paid into the county treasury on the first business day of each month for the operating month as required by law." "The earliest date at which this interest reached the county treasury during the period covered by this examination was the ninth, and the latest the thirtieth," the report continued.

As a result of mailing notices to delinquents to determine the liability of Harry C. Forry, former treasurer, the report states it was discovered that two collections in the Salt Rock-Montgomery union school district were not credited and the examiners made a finding of $8 19 against Harry S. Elliott, former treasurer.

Over $10,000 Due.

In the examination of the office of county auditor the report takes up the matter of $10,116.41 due the county from townships and abutting-property owners along two sections of the Marion-Waldo road. There is due from Marion and Pleasant townships and abutting property owners along Section C of this road $3,448.33 and from Pleasant and Waldo townships and abutting-property owners on Section K of the road there is due the county $6,668.08. At the time of this improvement the law provided that the county could assume the townships' portion of the cost by resolution. Evidently this was intended, but the resolution never was placed on the books of the county commissioners.

Errors in bills in the auditor's office showed that there is due the county from a list of thirty firms $202.58 and the county owes these firms $30.63, making a net balance due the county of $172 25.

In the Bain Detention home account, included in the audit of the probate and juvenile courts, the examiners found there is due Mrs. Emma Bain $44.99, showing this amount has been overpaid by her.

Summary Court Finding.

A summary of the finding against S. M. Court, clerk of courts, shows a deficit on the fact of the cash book of $2,051.93, due the county for distribution in the Waddell cases, $484, and errors on the cash book, $19.82, making a total due the clerk's official fund from S. M. Court, $2,525.-56. Another finding of $3 50 due the county for the purchase of a notarial seal. The report states this seal was purchased February 7, 1920, and points out there is no law authorising such a purchase.

Just before leaving Marion after completing their work, the examiners announced that the shortage in the office of the clerk of courts amounted to $2,524 86 and this amount was paid into the clerk's official fund by Mr. Court June 24. They also stated this payment would be shown in the report, but, probably through error, it is omitted. There also is a difference of one dollar in the amount paid by the clerk and the amount shown by the report, which is due probably to an error.

Penitentiary Costs.

The report also made a finding of 56.23 due the state from the county on penitentiary costs paid twice in the case of the state against W. F. Johnson. A note states this amount was paid by the auditor June 17, 1921.

A finding of $34 98 due former Sheriff James F. Ullom for boarding prisoners is contained in the report of the audit of the sheriff's office. In the audit of the recorder's office a finding of $23 23 due the county from George J. Orians was made. The report explained that this amount grew out of errors in and omission of charges for recording army discharges. Errors resulting in $82 54 due a number of firms for bills are shown in the report of the audit of the surveyor's office.

Several findings were made in the audit of the accounts of the county commissioners. A finding of $27 each against F. D. Smith, J. L. Berringer and E. E. Drake, commissioners, was made. These amounts represent overdrawing of fees for ditch services. The report states that when this matter was called to the attention of the commissioners, each gave his check for the amount.

Finding Against Chief.

A finding of $111.64 due the county from J. W. Thompson, chief of police, is made. This amount represents fees in criminal cases, including the taking of some prisoners to the Dayton work house, which the examiners hold are not allowed. Findings are made for alleged illegally collected fees against A. J. Sautter, as mayor, $3 60; T. E. Andrews, as mayor, $20.95; C. E. Haberman, as justice of the peace, $10.55; D. S. Belt, as constable, $12.50; E. G. Wideman, as justice of the peace, $2 60; G. Farr Larie, as justice of the peace, $4.60; O. S. Anthony, as mayor, of Waldo, $1 20, and Andy Whiteman, as constable, one dollar. The report notes that the amount due from Justice Wideman was paid June 15, that due from Mayor Anthony was paid June 18 and that due from Constable Whiteman was paid June 18.

The report also finds due the county for errors in bills for advertising $20 14 from the Tribune Publishing company and $1.52 from the Harding Publishing company. Another finding of $11.89 due the county from firms which collected war tax from the county is made.

About the Coroner.

In the report of the county infirmary it was found that there is due E. G. Slagle $49 28, an amount overpaid into the fund by him. There is no finding against the coroner, but the report states the practice of viewing bodies in cases wherein it appears to be quite unnecessary is still continued.

Findings of $2,760.35 due the collateral inheritance tax fund from administrators and executors or legatees of the estates of Amos H. Kling, Horatio Hoyles, Sarah E. Riley, John J. Walsh, Harriet Taylor, Della M. Hadley and Sarah Cusic are made. The report states this matter was called to the attention of the prosecuting attorney and he was urged to take the necessary steps to collect.

In the report of the audit of the humane society a finding of $96 due the county from James H. Eymon is made. The report explains this represents money paid the humane society for the support of children. The examiners state this money should be paid the county as the children are in the children's home.

No findings are made in the audits of the agricultural society, deputy supervisors of elections, county boards of school examiners and county board of education.

In the audit of the children's home accounts the report finds there is due D. E. Black, superintendent, eight dollars. The report explains this represents an overpayment made by him to Michael Waddell, president, and paid by Mr. Waddell into the county treasury.

SIGNS WILL BE ERECTED ALONG HARDING HIGHWAY

Meeting of Association Is Held at Galion.

The Harding-Highway association will push immediate plans for erecting appropriate signs along the route of the highway, and will soon issue emblems for use of members on their automobiles.

These facts were announced following a meeting of the representatives of all boards of directors of the various counties in the Harding Highway association of Galion, Tuesday afternoon and evening.

Following the business meeting of the association members, they were guests at a dinner given by the Galion Kiwanis club. State Highway Director Leon C. Herrick, of Columbus was unable to attend the dinner, which was to be given in his honor, because of an urgent meeting of Governor Davis' cabinet.

Among the talks as part of the after dinner program was one by Charles James, secretary of the Ohio State Automobile association.

AT 8 A. M. TODAY OLD SOL REGISTERS EIGHTY-FIVE

He Gets a Good Start and Keeps the Pole.

If Old Sol would only take his vacation, everybody'd be happy.

Yesterday sure was a hot day, but it had nothing on today. Old Sol shone down with a vengeance today and people would have sweltered a lot more had not a good breeze been stirring.

A breeze relieved the intense heat of yesterday and last night was ideal.

This orning started out early on a good hot schedule, the thermometer registering eighty-five at 8 a. m.

At 12:30 o'clock this afternoon the thermometer registered ninety-two, but by 1 o'clock, a pretty good breeze sprang up and the temperature dropped back to ninety degrees.

Chautauqua Continues to Draw Well

POTTER AND HIS CLAY CHAUTAUQUA FEATURE

Smith Damron Astonishes His Audience with His Art.

HISTORY OF POTTER'S WORK FROM ANCIENTS

Displays Samples of Chinaware Used by Washington, Lincoln and Others.

The Dixie Girls, two young ladies who are members of the Tennessee Duo, who gave an entertaining program yesterday afternoon, gave a half hour prelude to the main program last night. With a complete change in costume and program from the afternoon entertainment, the two southerners entertained the large audience with their typical interpretations of the Southland in their songs, stories and monologues. The first number was composed of a group of old songs which were sung by both members of the company. The songs were as follows:

"Grandmother's Advice," "When You and I Were Young Maggie," and "Polly Wolley Doodle." The next number was two soprano solos sung by Miss Baldridge, "Spring Serenade" by Gilbert, and "Swiss Echo Song," by Reeckert. Following this the two sang several old negro campmeeting songs which were decidedly typical of the old southern darkies.

Probably the Best.

The next number was probably the best on the program, the interpretation of a negro baptismal, which was uniquely given by Miss Baldridge. The last number on the prelude was a reading by Miss Baldridge, the poem, "Old Friends," by Edgar Guest. The Dixie Girls' program was decidedly unique in that both the young ladies are products of the true South and their interpretations of life below the Mason Dixon line were doubtless very true to life.

Following the prelude, Platform Manager E. J. Llewelyn made several announcements regarding changes in program. Due to the full day today no demonstration was to be given by Mrs. Alice Houston, but just the regular lecture scheduled.

Pageant Saturday Night.

The pageant to be given by the Junior organization will be staged Saturday evening at 7:30 o'clock which will be followed by a postlude by the Garner Jubilee company.

The main feature of the evening was then started with the introduction of Smith Damron, potter craftsman, who delivered the lecture, "The Potter and His Clay." There is probably not a more unique entertainment on the American platform than Mr. Damron's description of the process of the potter's art, the giving of its history, the display of American art pottery and china ware which is truely remarkable, and above all the lessons of character building, philosophy, combined with wit and humor, which Mr. Damon weaves into his material phases of the art.

Mr. Damron started his lecture as many visitors of the local platform have, by expressing the honor which he felt by having the privilege of lecturing upon the platform where President Harding accepted the nomination for the presidency. His first procedure in his lecture was the preparation of a lump of clay which he afterwards molded upon his potter's wheel into a flower vase.

History of Potter's Art.

During the process of the making of the vase he started his history of the potter's art which he said progressed down through the ages from prehistoric times and had during all of these centuries past been the theme of poets, the story of the ages. He compared his clay, which he shaped with the greatest of skill, to the human clay, which he said shaped itself into its worldly form through the influence of outside forces. He asked his audience to remember the two fundamentals of successful pottery making, namely, to find the true center of the wheel, and to keep the clay level at the top.

After the making of the flower vase, Mr. Damon described the difference between glazed and unglazed table ware and the processes of placing designs upon the ware. He then demonstrated the light test which determines true porcelain or china from semi-porcelain ware, illustrating that china ware was transculent while the other was not.

Displays Samples.

Following this he showed the audience samples of china ware used by presidents, Washington, Lincoln, McKinley and Wilson. He also demonstrated to the audience dinner plates at prices ranging from $50 to $500 a dozen, showing that differences in prices were not due to difference in grades of porcelain but to the amount of decoration placed upon the ware. He then very ardently recommended American-made pottery to foreign-made, illustrating that American-made ware was of stronger endurance and was just as artistically fashioned. Following this he made several more pieces of pottery by use of his wheel and all during the demonstration of the construction of the clay, he brought gems of literature to the minds of his audience by the quoting such poets as Van Dyke, Longfellow and Richey and at the same time working his dry witticisms, philosophy and humor into his lecture. He ended his lecture by applying the two fundamentals of pottery making to the human being—that one should find and maintain a true center to keep level at the top and to ring true at all times. Following the lecture those who desired to witness the remarkable exhibit of table ware were permitted to do so.

INTENSIVE DRILL FOR BIG PAGEANT

Affairs Rapidly Rounding into Shape for Event.

Intensive drill for the pageant, "Courage and Vision," made up the morning work for the Junior Chautauqua members this morning. The pageant which will be staged in the pavilion Saturday evening at 7:30 o'clock is being rounded into shape and the affair promises to be a big success.

The afternoon scheduled game periods and story telling hours were carried out as usual and affairs are progressing nicely under the supervision of Mrs. Daisy Freeman Asman, instructor and supervisor.

INJUNCTION STOPS ROAD IMPROVEMENT

D. F. Molloy, of Marion, Is One of Bidders.

Praying that the county commissioners be enjoined from collecting assessments against their lands for constructing what is known as the George A. Wick road, Cardington township, George S. Coomer, F. M. Curl and others have begun suit in common pleas court, says this week's Cardington Independent. They claim that the board, after taking favorable action in 1920, rescinded the resolution and proceeded to adopt a new plan, the petition states, contrary to law.

The road is also known as the Kreis road and the contract for its construction was set to have been let Saturday. A restraining order was issued by the court on Friday preventing the letting of the contract.

Thhe bids were opened but no award was made. The bids were as follows: D. F. Molloy of Marion, $50,938, H. F. Ault & Son $52,684, John McNamara, $52,787.75; W. H. Miller, $54,028.14; D. L. Brady, $55,108.61.

Miss Marguerite Bollinger, of Delaware, visited her aunt, Mrs. J. C. Wiley, of east Center street, the past week.

THIS IS THE LATEST HEADGEAR FROM PARIS

Strings of beads are attached to a new hat just launched at a Paris race course, with curious effect. The model is of black straw, with upturned ear flaps and a high, stiff crown shaped like a Russian diadem with a jet ornament of a conspicuous make set above the brow. The necklaces of jet are passed around the hat and fall from the ear pieces upon the wearer's breast.

DIXIE GIRLS PLEASE CHAUTAUQUA CROWD

Varied Program of Music and Readings Rendered.

PROGRAM OF SIMPLE SOUTHERN MELODIES

Miss Baldridge and Miss Crutcher Are the Dixie Girls—A Cooking Lesson.

Two charming young ladies from the Southland, known on the Chautauqua platform as "The Dixie Girls," gave the Marion Chautauqua a varied and very enjoyable program Wednesday afternoon, pleasing the audience as only two talented and delightful young ladies could please with music and readings.

The attendance was very good and the program, mostly simple southern melodies and generally familiar to most every one, afforded just the right kind of an entertainment for a hot afternoon. The pleasing personalities of the entertainers and their splendid program, combined with the good breeze which swept through the auditorium, made the heat seem less intense.

The two young ladies composing the Dixie duo are Miss Fanny May Baldridge, of Kentucky, soprano and banjo, and Miss Ida Crutcher, of Tennessee, contralto and guitar.

"In the Gloaming."

Miss Baldridge and Miss Crutcher made their appearance singing "In the Gloaming" and then, after they in a charming manner introduced each other, favored the audience with a Stephen Foster medley, delighting with "Old Kentucky Home," "O, O Susana," "Old Uncle Ned," "Way Down Upon the Suwanee River," "Camp Town Races" and "Hard Times." In these songs the young ladies played their own accompaniment on the banjo and guitar.

After a song, "Welcome Pretty Primrose Flower," Miss Baldridge sang "Good Morning, Mr. Sunshine," and "One Fine Day," from the opera, "Madam Butterfly." All these were beautifully sung.

Both young ladies sang "The Bullfrog Patrol," which was very much enjoyed, and they followed this with an old English ballad, "No, John, No."

Negro Mammy Monologue.

Miss Baldridge gave a monologue of a negro mammy visiting in the Northland, which was much appreciated and very amusing. Both followed with a negro camp meeting song, "No One Knows the Trouble I See" using the banjo and guitar accompaniment.

Miss Crutcher sang "Rose Dream," "She was a Lily," and a lullaby. Both she and Miss Baldridge possess very sweet voices and sang very well.

After a group of humorous Kentucky Mountaineer songs, by both Miss Baldridge and Miss Crutcher, Miss Baldridge gave a poem "Heap o' Livin'," by Edgar Guest, and then the young ladies closed the entertainment with Schubert's Serenade."

Following the afternoon's entertainment a large number of women remained for the cooking class taught by Miss Alice Sherfy. Her subject yesterday was "salads" and after she had explained the making of salads and salad dressings, she prepared and passed around samples.

Look at the Initials on Trees. That's Enough.

Romance is not dead in Marion.

As one travels back and forth through the city's three parks and the old High school grounds, past the various big trees and possible places where there is room for a pair of initials, one finds pair after pair that have been made.

Memories of 1,000 forgotten loves are above the newly carved initials, true to all traditions scrolled within a heart.

The big penknives are still at work, although there is a tendency today to make the initials smaller and work in a verse now and then when they have time, usually culminating in perhaps one of two lines and a desultory finish.

HOT WEATHER MAKES HAIR GROW FASTER

That's Why Barbers Laugh and Grow Fat.

Barbers of Marion laugh and grow fat during the present hot weather.

In spite of hard times and the great mass of massaged young men who are out of work, the barber is one man in the city whose business is keeping up the same as usual. They claim the hot weather makes a man's head of hair and beard grew faster, and in addition the "shave 'n haircut—bay rum" makes him feel seventy-five cents better.

THE HUB OF COMMERCE.

Daily Proverb—"He least discredits his travels who returns the same as he went."

No man ever established credit at home by buying his supplies from a mail-order house.

Germany is paying her debts, but the proposition doesn't appear to have assumed the proportions of an epidemic over in Europe.

It's our guess that the Canadian newspaper asking: "Are there two moons?" isn't published in Ontario.

According to a lecturer, music will take the place of booze in the United States. Not on your life. Who ever heard of a fellow full of music unloading his woes onto a bartender?

Some people can not understand all this hubbub over the fact that the house put oil on the free list. Who wants to drink oil as a beverage, anyway?

If all the self-confessed descendants of the Mayflowerites visit Plymouth, we know a mighty fine little town that's going to be awfully crowded.

A theatrical item says chorus girls are going back to long dresses on the stage. No wonder. They have to have something in addition to age to distinguish them from the girls on the streets.

A vacation doesn't take so much time in itself, but it certainly takes time to get into shape for the ordeal and to recover from it.

Of course, it costs more now for water and ice, but look at all we save on the coal and electricity we don't use. Here we have that old law of compensations at work again.

Apropos of the statement that "Cuba is desperate," it might be easier to grieve for her could we forget that thirty-two cent sugar.

One way to get a line on another work of a paragrapher for humanity is to figure a fly swatted for each line he writes, and even at that the ratio is a bit low.

"What this country needs most," says the Toledo Blade, "is a man's straw hat that won't look as if it were ten years old by August 1." Jack should buy one of those "genuine" Panamas—made in Mexico.

Since the old "Tiger of France" has made the claim that he won the war, who's going to bob up with the philosophic statement that "there's glory enough for all?"

The Chicago Herald-Examiner says the first requisite of a professional reformer is to be able to see a story on the front page of the newspaper. Not a bit of it. The first requisite of a professional reformer is an innate aversion to work.

MOB VIOLENCE.

It appears that when some folks in a town do not approve of the conduct of certain persons, they express their disapproval with tar and feathers. In Florida, in Texas, in Missouri, tar parties have been held recently; the victims were of both sexes and the offenses charged were various.

This business of tarring and feathering is a variety of lynch law that should be vigorously suppressed. Nobody, and no body of private persons, has the right to pass upon the conduct of other private persons and administer punishment of any sort, much less an unpleasant application of sticky tar and clinging feathers. One phase of what must be admitted is a wave of recrudescence of lawlessness in this country has taken the form of efforts of private persons to correct what they think is misconduct on the part of other private persons. It is just as unlawful to apply a coat of tar and feathers as it is to rob a store or to hold up a citizen and rob him of his wallet. Yet some persons seem to think they are doing a community a good deed, or making things right generally, when they have a tar party.

Tar is in style at this time, and when anybody needs "straightening out" it seems to be customary to do it with tar. A few of those tar entertainers ought to be given a sample of their own entertainment, locally, as an example of others who may be attracted by the new fad.

MORE FREIGHT MOVED.

The latest published bulletin of the Association of Railway Executives pridefully points to improvement in freight movements in the twelve months up to March 1, 1921, as compared with the three preceding years.

Ton miles—one ton carried one mile—increased 7.22 per cent. over the next preceding twelvemonth and 4.77 per cent. over the 1917-18 period. This notwithstanding the higher freight rates that were effective for half of the 1920-21 time. More freight car miles—one car moved one mile—likewise is reported, while the loading efficiency was increased to the highest point reached in the forty-eight months, the tons per car in 1920-21 averaging 29.18 which is getting very close to the standard of thirty tons per car which the railroad managers have sought to attain.

From the foregoing, it may reasonably be concluded that the "better day" is dawning for the railroads. Some no doubt will contend that here is proof that freight rates can and should be reduced; Not necessarily, however. There remains to be bridged a wide gulf between income and outgo of American railroads. Increased economies are imperative, but maintainance of rates for a time may likewise be necessary. The report just made tends to refute the claim that existing high rates are a bar to revival of general business, since freight movement has grown in spite of the very high charges for carriages.

The writer who says that the world never saw such exhibitions as the women of today make in entering vehicles evidently wasn't around when women wore hoops.

"Turks Move Their Capital to Asia Minor," reads a head. The Big Three didn't appear able to drive the Turk out of Europe, but little Greece seems to be doing it.

We insist upon taking these stories about the president chopping wood on a vacation with a grain of salt, and anyway they are dangerous. The newspaper correspondents may soon be insisting that mere paragraphers put in their vacations at hard work, unmindful of the fact that change is the first essential to a vacation.

RATIONAL LIVING.

A Cleveland physician who is a personal friend and golf companion of John D. Rockefeller predicts that Mr. Rockefeller will live to be 100 years old. Many of us can remember the day not so far back when it was generally known that Mr. Rockefeller was a sufferer from indigestion. A remark frequently heard was "what good is all his money if he has to live on crackers and milk?" Many shook their heads gloomily and predicted that he would not even encompass the traditional three-score-and-ten years allotted to man, but he has exceeded that limit by twelve years and is so vicerous that his Cleveland physician does not hesitate to say that he will reach the century mark.

The reason for Mr. Rockefeller remaining on earth so long after the time croakers set for his demise more than likely is his sane and orderly way of living. He once suffered from indigestion, but does so no more. He may have at one time been required to restrict his diet to "crackers and milk," but he now can eat anything that is edible, according to the physician who says he will live many years longer. We have no knowledge of what Mr. Rockefeller's diet may have been at any time in his life, but we are certain that if conservation of his health required any limitation he adhered to it strictly. In other words he did not try to eat bologna sausage if his stomach said "only crackers and milk, please. Even now, the medical man says, the capitalist eats sparingly.

But that is not all—his daily life is orderly and sane, run on a schedule with a time for everything. He has time for work and has time for play and it probably is proper arrangement of his labor, feeding and recreation that makes him hale and vigorous at an age when most men have passed out of this life.

LIFE'S VAUDEVILLE.

[By Dr. James Ball Naylor.]

PRACTICING DECEITION.

It doesn't pay, in the end, to practice deception.

There may be rare instances in which temporary advantage is gained through deception; but, as a rule, such advantage is insecure and short-lived.

Deception promises much—and performs little.

The liar gets caught in the lie.

The deceiver gets detected.

We can fool part of the people all the time; but those persons are few in number—and of so little importance as hardly to be worth attention. We can fool all the people part of the time; but we can't keep them fooled. And we can't fool all the people all the time. Over and over it has been tried; and over and over it has failed.

Truth pays better than falsehood.

A merchant had advertised for a boy to do odd jobs about his place of business. Late in the afternoon of the day on which applicants for the position were to appear, a freckle-faced, blue-eyed, honest-looking boy applied for the job.

"Do you like to work?" smiling inquired the merchant.

"No, sir," the lad replied bluntly.

"Then you can have the job," grinned the merchant. "You are the first boy who's been here today who didn't lie about it—and say yes when I asked him the question."

That boy was honest.

That merchant was wise.

The boy didn't like to work—and said so; but the merchant knew he would work.

Deception frequently proves a boomerang—that comes back to bruise the head of him who starts it on its course.

Consider the following anecdote from the Pittsburgh Chronicle-Telegraph:

A young man was walking up and down the platform of a country railroad junction in England, trying to see a car that had a vacant seat. He didn't find it; and, assuming an official air, he walked up to the last car and announced in stentorian tones:

"All out of here; this car isn't going."

There were exclamations loud and deep from the occupants of the car; but they all piled out and made their way to cars ahead. The smile on the young man's face increased as he took possession of a seat and appropriated another for his luggage.

"Ah," he murmured, "it's a grand thing to be born clever. Now I wish they'd start."

By and by the stationmaster put his head in the door.

"Are you the smart young man who said this car isn't going?"

"Yes," said the clever one, smiling.

"Well," said the stationmaster, with a grin, also, "it isn't. The brakeman heard what you said, and he uncoupled it. He thought you were a director."

The biter got bit.

Deception seldom pays—except in worthless coin.

POINTED PARAGRAPHS.

Lots of family trees bear mighty poor fruit.

It's often unwise for a man to be as funny as he can.

Money talks, but, unlike men, it never gives itself away.

An apt quotation is sometimes better than an original remark.

Women are foolish if they believe the fool things men say when in love.

The majority of men are unknown to fame and fortune—and are likely to remain so.

It might be well for girls to remember that willful waste brings woeful want of desirable husbands.

It's a mean man who will rejoice at finding a button off his coat when his wife hasn't time to sew it on.

Occasionally we find a man who despises the people who flatter him and hates those who do not flatter him at all.

Mankind is divided by a pessimist into two classes—those who earn a living without setting it and those who get a living without earning it.

Why Good Paint Is Cheapest

Bargain paints at "special" prices are usually worth far less than the price asked. After they have been on a while, they fade and usually crack and peel off, exposing the surface beneath to the wear of the elements.

Shepard Paints are made for service. They hold their colors, and keep buildings thoroughly covered with a weather-proof coating. All ingredients that enter into their making are of the highest grade. Our method of selling these paints direct to the consumer through our own retail stores enables us to save the jobber's profit and sell at prices far below other high grade paints.

Shepard's paints are not cheap paints, but they are low priced.

Lowest Prices Ever Quoted on Titan and International Tractors

The Harvester Company has made another big price cut on Titan and International tractors. This reduction wipes out all former advances and puts these tractors at the lowest prices at which they have ever been sold. We are offering:

International 8-16, $900

This price is about one-fourth less than that of March 1, 1921. The new price includes all necessary equipment—platform, binders, governor, belt pulley—which cost extra on some tractors.

Titan 10-20, $900

This is the lowest price ever quoted on the Titan, considering equipment included (formerly sold extra). At this price the Titan 2-plow tractor is the best value in the farm power field.

International 15-30, $1750

This also is lower than any former price. You cannot find a better 4-plow tractor for the money.

All prices are f. o. b. Chicago. The Harvester Company advise us that these prices are made regardless of manufacturing costs, and that they do not guarantee to maintain them. These prices certainly justify the immediate purchase of a tractor.

We can arrange suitable terms for you. Come in and see us.

"GOLF WIDOW" IN NEW YORK DIVORCE COURTS

Plaintiff Claims Husband Neglects Her for Golf.

New York, July 28.—The "golf widow" has long been famed in cartoon and story, but it remained for Mrs. Sterling P. Hayward, today, to actually give "her" an official and legal status.

Mrs. Hayward started action for divorce against her husband, Sterling P. Hayward, vice president and manager of the Connolly Iron & Governor company, naming "Mrs. Golf" as corespondent. Her husband's addiction to golf has been so pronounced during the last few years, she charged, that he was virtually excluded her from his life. Golf, she averred, has become a "mania" with him.

Last April, her complaint sets forth, Hayward went to England to see the international tournament, leaving her but $15 a week on which to live. Frequent trips to Atlantic City in the summer and Pinehurst in the winter, for golf, also are cited.

VEIOCK ON SPORTS

New York, July 28.—Time-honored rivalry between the Atlantic and Pacific coasts will be set aside, to some extent, during the coming tennis season, as the country's greatest stars band together in their efforts to repel invading players in the Davis cup and national championship matches.

Competition in the national title events, however, will be keener from an intersectional standpoint than since before the war and while each American player will do his or her best in turning back foreign aspirants to the titles, cooperation will end right there. California and other sections of the West will be well represented in the singles and doubles, this year.

William M. Johnston, joint winner of the Davis cup with Bill Tilden, will be one and it is expected that Clarence Griffin and Roland Roberts will also take part in the national events, this fall, while Miss Helen Wills, San Francisco girl phenom, may be entered in the woman's events.

Mlle. Lenglen, French tennis star, is due to sail from France, next Saturday and Mrs. Molla Bjurstedt Mallory, American woman champion, is expected to start for the United States about the same time, in order to be here in time to defend her title.

WITH THE PUGS

Rumpus After Fight.

Cleveland, July 28.—Official reports were being dispatched, today, by the Cleveland boxing commission to various state and national boxing bodies, crediting Bryan Downey, of Cleveland, with a knockout over Johnny Wilson, former lightweight champion and giving the title to Downey. The commission decided that no "hand picked" referee should be allowed to protect a boxer in retaining his title. Johnny Gardner, of Massachusetts, had ruled Wilson retained the title on a foul.

For the next two days Uhler-Phillips are making a special price on a case of peaches.—Adv. 1-c.

DID HE FIX THE WHITE SOX PLAYERS?

Arnold Rothstein, of New York, who, according to the testimony given at the trial of the indicted White Sox players, put up the money for the "fixing" of the world series between Cincinnati and Chicago. Rothstein has denied the charges. It is further alleged that Rothstein cleaned up several hundred thousand dollars on the series.

BASEBALL

Tagging the Bases.

The Reds dealt the Braves a terrific blow by taking two games with Luque and Marquard on the firing line.

Lee Fohl's panicky Browns took their cue from Urban Shocker and handed the Yanks a lacing in the opener at the Polo grounds, touching up Mays and Quinn for thirteen hits.

Timely hitting by Bush and Shorten, Dugan's fumble and a sacrifice fly by Veach gave the Tigers a victory at Philadelphia.

Reuther was the whole show at Chicago, pitching brilliantly against the Cubs, driving home two runs in addition to scoring one himself.

Eddie Foster's timely hitting and a bad throw by Smith of the Indians, helped the Red Sox to victory at Boston.

A triple play, Hornsby to Torporer to Fournier, squelched a Philly rally and enabled the Cardinals to take an easy victory.

Arthur Nehf, giving up but seven scattered hits, was strongly backed by Giants who handed Cooper a beating by timely swatting. Meusel played left field for the Giants.

Dicky Kerr walked a couple of Senators and allowed four hits in the third inning. All of which beat the White Sox.

Limited to Deer Hunters.

The sixty-third annual picnic and shoot of the Shelby County Deer Hunters' association will be held Wednesday, August 10, at the Shelby county fairground at Sidney. The shoot will begin at 1 o'clock and is limited to actual deer hunters. Contests and free-for-all shoots will be held before and after the regular shoots.

SMUTS POSTPONES HIS DEPARTURE

Irish Cabinet Still Discussing British Proposals.

London, July 28.—Further protracted consideration was given by the Irish Republican cabinet to the British government's proposals relative to an Irish settlement, but the cabinet apparently reached no decision.

A communication from Eamonn De Valera is reported to have reached the British prime minister, probably asking further elucidation on some doubtful points in the proposals.

Another significant incident of the day was the postponement by General Jan C Smuts of his departure for South Africa until Aug 5 which is taken to imply the belief that his services as mediator may again be needed.

Still more interesting however, was the speech of Lord Birkenhead, the lord high chancellor, in the house of lords intimating that the government anticipated that the negotiations may last for weeks and inviting the parliament and the country to have patience with the difficulties which Valera with his colleagues may be experiencing in Dublin. He reproved the rebellious Unionists in the coalition who denounced the government's policy as shameful and humiliating.

PASSENGER FARES DEMAND ATTENTION

Should Be First Reduced, Rail Chief Declares.

Huntington, W Va July 28.—Passenger rates should come down first in the shakeup impending in railway rates, stated W J Harahan, president of the Chesapeake and Ohio railway here. He expressed the opinion that readjustment would ultimately be accomplished in a manner satisfactory to both shippers and railways. "But," he added "there are many knotty problems to solve and the process may seem a slow one."

Mr Harahan declined to comment upon the action of Henry Ford in raising wages and reducing freight rates on the Detroit, Toledo and Ironton other than to state that in his opinion the move would have little or no effect upon the other railways of the country.

ODOR SO BAD PAINT ON NEARBY HOUSES SPOILED

Famous Castalia Blue Hole Said To Be Polluted.

Can you imagine pollution of the Castalia blue hole, near Sandusky, the depth of which never has been ascertained?

It has become so polluted that folks living nearby have complained of the odor corroding the paint on houses.

W H Dittoe, chief engineer for the state health department, has sent a man to investigate. He has a suspicion that the pollution is traceable to Bellevue sewage disposal.

State Health Director Snively will himself go Friday, it is announced.

BOGUS STAMPS ARE SEIZED BY OFFICERS

Three Men Taken in Raid in New York City.

New York July 28—Government agents, assisted by city detectives of the Italian squad, seized forged revenue stamps having an aggregate face value of about $2,000,000 and thousands of forged whisky bottle labels bottled in bond certificates and withdrawal permits. The articles were found in two places, one on Ann street and the other on Fulton street. Three men were arrested at the Ann street address. Police said the men had been engaged in selling the articles to illicit liquor dealers at the rate of $2.15 for a set of a dozen each. The men arrested gave their names as Victor Sileo, Louis Santangelo, both printers, and John Dochnahl a salesman.

OBITUARY

Temple—John Mason who was born near Mt. Victory, March 20th, 1890 was killed in action in Argonne Forest, October 21, 1918. Had he lived just twenty days longer he would have seen the signing of the armistice and the end of the war. He was a member of company B, and the 307th Field Signal battalion, having volunteered after the United States entered the war. A comrade who knew his soldier life testified that he was in every way a good soldier not needlessly endangering himself but ready to do his duty no matter how great the danger might be.

He united with the Union Baptist church in early manhood and remained a member until his death. He was industrious, gentle by nature and particularly thoughtful of and attentive to his parents. His immediate relatives left to mourn his death are his father, John Temple, and two brothers, Joseph W. Temple, of Green Camp, and C. E. Temple of Columbus and one sister, Mrs. Nora Temple, of Columbus.

KLINES ASK SUSPENSION OF COGNOVIT JUDGMENT

Alleging Note to Stockyards Is Signed Through Threats.

COZAD DIVORCE CASE IS DISMSSED TODAY

Prosecutor Blocks Payment of $2,500 for County Home Improvement.

Petition for suspension of judgment on a cognovit note taken by the Marion Union Stockyards company in the common pleas court January 6 was filed in the common pleas court Tuesday afternoon by L. C. Kline and Lot L. Kline, through Lilly, Abbott & Lapsley, of Ohio. The petitioners allege the note was signed because of threats of criminal prosecution against them.

The petition states judgment for $414.65 was taken on the cognovit note by the stockyards company without any notice or summons being made on the petitioners. Following this judgment, they state the lands of Lot L. Kline, in Allen county, were levied against as well as the personal property of both of them.

Shortly before the note was executed, the petition states L. C. Kline was acting under the direction of the company purchasing registered Holstein cows at a cost of $10,421. The petition states this amount was paid by the company and the cows shipped to the company at Marion.

After the stock was unloaded, Kline alleges certain members of the company came to him with threats of criminal prosecution and demanded that he repay the company amounts expended for feed and care for the stock for four days while in transit and while the animals were in the company's yards at Marion the bill amounting to $197. He claims that as a part of such threats he was taken to the office of a member of the company and required to sign the note and secure the signature of his wife.

The Klines were former teachers in the Harding High school.

Reconciliation Is Effected.

The divorce suit of Ciara A. Cozad against Oliver L. Cozad was settled by agreement of the parties in the common pleas court this morning and the costs paid. The case was set for hearing Monday morning, but a reconciliation was effected before the case was called.

Set Up General Denial.

Answers of Dayton Butz and Grace Butz were filed in the common pleas court Wednesday afternoon in the suit of Annadelle Thibaut to set aside the will of Anna G. Salmon. The answers were filed through Justice, Young & Mouser.

Both answering defendants admit they are legatees of the will, set up a general denial of allegations and ask dismissal of the petition.

Prosecutor Blocks Payment.

A temporary injunction restraining the county auditor and treasurer from paying the United Electric Supply company and the Columbus, Delaware & Marion Electric company any money for electrical work at the Marion County home was granted in the common pleas court this morning on petition of Fred W. Werner, as prosecuting attorney.

Prosecuting Attorney Warner's petition sets forth that June 23 the commissioners passed a resolution authorizing the United Electric Supply company and the Columbus, Delaware & Marion Electric company to install, by force account, certain electric poles, wires and other electrical apparatus at the Marion County home for $2,500, "which pretended contract is in contravention of the laws and statutes of the state of Ohio." The prosecutor charges the contract was entered into without advertising for bids, without submitting the matter to the public for competitive bidding, that the contract was not awarded to the lowest and best bidder for the work and that it amounted to an expenditure of more than $200.

Prosecutor Warner further charges the commissioners were wholly without authority of law to execute such a contract and that the contract was not called to his attention or approved by him. He also states the auditor never certified to the commissioners that there was sufficient money in the proper fund before the contract was entered into and states the contract is wholly illegal. He says the commissioners have threatened to allow bills for the payment of the agreement and that if the money is paid it will be misapplied and illegally drawn from the treasury. He also says that unless an injunction is allowed the taxpayers will have no relief.

The prosecutor asks that the auditor and treasurer be restrained from paying the two companies any amount whatsoever for the work and that on final hearing the injunction be made permanent.

Monroe-Houghton Suit Settled.

The suit of Howard E. Monroe against the Houghton Manufacturing company was settled without record and the costs paid in the common pleas court today. Monroe sued for $750 alleged due him as salary.

GEORGE W. HINAMON AND HIS WIFE ARE INJURED

When Motoring on Davids Street Last Night.

Mrs George W Hinamon, of Bale avenue, received a deep cut in the middle of the forehead, requiring eight stitches to close, Wednesday evening about 9:30 o'clock when Mr. Hinamon drove his automobile over the curb on Davids street to avoid a collision with another car, and it struck a tree. She was taken to the city hospital.

Mrs Hinamon was injured by being thrown against the windshield and Mr Hinamon was bruised across the chest by being thrown against the steering wheel. The car was damaged.

Mr. and Mrs. Hinamon in company with Mr and Mrs Harry S. Elliott, of Bellefontaine avenue, had been out riding and the Hinamons had just left Mr. and Mrs. Elliott at their home and were returning to their own home. While driving on Davids street two men, in another car, came up from the rear and, in trying around them, caught the side of their car. To get out of the way, Mr. Hinamon turned into the curb Gets Suspended Sentence.

William Partlow, arrested at Fulton Wednesday on a non-support charge preferred by his wife, was found guilty in Justice G. Farr Larsh court this morning and given a suspended sentence of ninety days in the Dayton workhouse. The sentence was suspended providing he pays four dollars a week toward the support of his eight-months old child. Mrs. Ethel Partlow, the wife, who is not seventeen years of age, was cited in the juvenile court as a delinquent.

Plans for an overnight hike next Tuesday evening were made at the meeting of troop No. 7, Boy Scouts, Wednesday evening, in St. Mary's school hall. Fifteen members have signed up for camp and there is still room for about fifteen more.

"3—During the peace conference in Paris, the representatives of Great Britain, France and the United States agreed to recommend to their respective governments to take in satisfaction of their advances made to Belgium prior to November 11, 1918, German reparation bonds of a special issue of bearer bonds maturing May 1, 1926, to be made under the treaty of Versailles and this recommendation was communicated by the president February 22, 1921. No action has been taken thereon.

"Subsequently the principal European powers and Germany, in fixing the amount of the indemnity to be paid by Germany and the bonds to be issued in connection therewith, provided for an issue of what are designated as series, A, bonds, which should include the bearer bonds just mentioned. Whether what has been done will make this matter a subject for further consideration, I can not say.

"3—I would like to avail myself of the present opportunity to clear up the matter about which there seems to be so much apprehension and that is to the power given to act to accept bonds of some country other than the debtor country. So far as concerns the principal debtors' power which together owes without accrued interest over $9,000,000,000, there is no intention or thought of payment in bonds other than those of the debtor country.

"The authority now asked, however, covers debts owing to us by Czecho-Slovakia, Russia, Serbia, Poland and a large number of other countries. Their resources and their ability to pay differ widely and the conditions which will have to be dealt with can not now be foreseen. The situation which confronts the treasury is exceedingly complex."

In Occupied Zone.

Washington, July 28.—Secretary of War Weeks, today, reported to the senate that there is a total of 13,795 American troops in the occupied zone of Germany. The total cost of the occupation for American troops from December 1918 to April 30, 1921, is $275,324,000. This sum is ultimately to be paid by Germany, who now owes the United States on this account: $240,744,311.

Report Delayed.

Washington, July 28.—Attorney General Daugherty will not render a report on the legal aspects of a proclamation of peace with Germany to the president for at least two weeks, he announced this afternoon.

Next to Recognition.

Washington, July 28.—Although the United States has not formally recognized Afghanistan, it was stated officially, today, that this government expects that other nations will look upon the action of Secretary of States Hughes in receiving Mohamed Wali Khan and the Afghanistan mission, as tantamount to recognition. M Khan presented credentials as minister to the United States and it is understood in official circles that this constitutes recognition.

AN ULTIMATUM FOR GOVERNOR

early today

Ike Small, under indictment on charges involving misuse of $2,000,000 in state interest funds, dropped from sight late yesterday, when his legal advisers reported him leaving Chicago. His whereabouts, early today, were unknown.

Reports from Hankakee, his home town, declared he had not arrived there while employes at the governor's mansion here said he had not returned to Springfield.

Three warrants for his arrest on the "fund" charges were held meanwhile by Sheriff Henry Mester, who was awaiting reply from the governor to his offer for a "conditional surrender."

The legal forces of Sangamon county were preparing to wage a bitter fight against any attempt of the governor to evade trial through technical processes of the law. It was announced that State's Attorney Mortimer would oppose a habeas corpus proceeding or a writ for change of venue from Sangamon county. Mortimer, in effect, flatly challenged the governor to test his case before any tribunal.

"No man can evade the responsibility of a criminal act in his county," said Mortimer. "The man who believes that he can do so is poorly advised."

The governor's two principal legal weapons are the habeas corpus proceeding and a writ for a change of venue from this county. Use or either, according to Mortimer, will be fought through every court. Both would compel a test of the governor's case, it was stated.

Move Anticipated.

The state's attorney, anticipating a habeas corpus proceeding in Chicago, yesterday, refused to permit Small's surrender in that city. The Governor's arrest within Sangamon county, it is contended, would compel his attorneys to bring the habeas corpus proceedings before the court of appeals for the Springfield district. He must, however, submit to arrest.

If he surrenders himself to the authorities, he will be immediately released under $50,000 bonds or on his own recognizance. The habeas corpus proceeding, it was pointed out, will be then brought to test the validity of the governor's technical arrest, although its common usage is to obtain the physical release of a prisoner.

This action, it was stated, would involve a new angle of the law itself and might result in a long drawn out legal battle over technicalities involving a question of the court's jurisdiction. The proposed suing for a writ of change of venue, it was stated, involves the filing of affidavits by the governor showing that the sentiment of Sangamon county is overwhelmingly prejudiced against him, thus preventing a fair trial. The court must also be shown to be prejudiced.

The governor, at an early hour today, had not replied to the request of Sheriff Mester that he submit himself to service of the warrants held here against him.

"I am still awaiting a reply from the governor to my offer that he could name his own conditions of surrender," said Mester. "I will do nothing until I hear from him."

RUSS PEASANTS ARE DESPERATE

famine area to Baku, in the Caucasus.

The German movement to succor Russia has resulted in a political feud in Berlin. The Socialists demand that the aid be non-partisan and purely humanitarian. On the other hand, the Communists are agitating in favor of capitalizing the movement of political advantages. Both factions are trying to secure control of the succoring movement among the labor unions.

Are Exaggerated.

London, July 2.—Press reports of famine conditions in Russia have been greatly exaggerated, Premier Lloyd George stated in the house of commons today, in reply to inquiries from members.

The British government, he added has received no request for assistance.

To Secure Help.

Copenhagen, July 28.—In order to obtain help abroad, Lenine is considering the advisability of conditionally recognizing Russia's public debt, the newspaper Politiken, stated today. If recognized, interest payments would begin on Russian government bonds in 1923. The newspaper did not give the source of its information.

MAN INVENTS WAY TO SETTLE BELT ARGUMENT

Read This, Men, for It Is Really Entertaining.

Men, it's here at last—the solution and the end of the suspender-belt controversy that's been raging for, lo, these many years!

L. B. Moats, No. 212 LaFayette street, Niles, has discovered the insermitable, neighbors say, to settle the question that has caused those of the male persuasion to square in bitter controversy ever since Cain suspended his fig-leaf by a grapevine thrown over his shoulder and Abel hitched his mother governor up with a thong of goat's hide that 'round his tummy.

"A man can't keep his pants up with a belt," proclaims the redoubtable Moats. "Of course, he may manage to hide his nakedness if he keeps his belt strapped tightly around his girzard. What I mean is you can't keep your pants up with a belt and really enjoy life at the same time for looking' to see whether you've still got your pants on.

"If you haven't lost them, you have to be hitchin' 'em up every whipstitch or else tryin' to persuade your shirt to keep its place like a respectable shirt tail ought, instead of flyin' in the breeze like the postoffice flag.

"Nosiree!" says Moats. "A belt is the contraption of the devil—nothing less. The good, old gallus for me, you bet!"

The chief objection to the gallus has always been its unsightliness. Young blades especially discarded it for this reason. But Moats has overcome all objections.

Here is how. He has invented a shirt-vest. He takes any desired shirt material and out of it he fashions a garment just like a vest except that it has a high neck and neckband to which can be fastened the usual linen collar. He puts his suspenders on over—sh-h-h!—his undershirt his shirt-vest on over his suspenders and voila!—there he is cool and comfortable, no troublesome shirt tail to fuss with, plenty of ventilation, no danger of losing his trousers, and neat and trig looking as even a dandy could wish.

Moats says he's going to patent his invention interest some one with capital in it, and then devote himself to the manufacture of this great boon to the male of the species.

MARION DAILY STARS TO PLAY COLUMBUS MENDALS

Game Will Be Staged Here Sunday Afternoon.

The desire of many local baseball fans to see the Columbus Mendels return here, will be filled Sunday, when the aggregation of Columbus stars will meet the Marion Daily Star team, at Lincoln park. The Mendel team opened the season here and defeated the locals five to one, but the local team went in without having any signals or team practice.

The Daily Stars are now going in fine form and are confident that they can take the measure of the Mendels. First Baseman Near, who was out of the game here on account of a bad ankle, is to be at his post, and in addition the visiting team will probably have the services of Chaffin and Grady, both of whom have had league experience. The Columbus team will use the same line-up here as they will use when they meet the New York Americans at Neil park, August 14. The game will be called promptly at 2:30 o'clock, and a record crowd is expected.

Q—What sort of language should the motion picture scenario writer use?

A—Photoplay writers should think and write in terms of pictures. Remember that everything you write will have to be interpreted by means of action in pictures. Select words that will bring forth visions of pictures. Shun adjectives and descriptive words and write in action language. Remember that the words of action are verbs.

Q—Where does Marguerite Courtot live now?

A—This favorite of the early movie days is now living at 19 Hudson place, Weehawken, New Jersey.

Says Home Shortage Will Be Alleviated

"HOUSES need not worry about a home shortage if they will only stop making wildcat investments and place their savings in financial institutions of recognized stability," according to John W. Prugh, the new state inspector of building and loan institutions

Prugh declares the investing public is through taking chances and that "safety first" again has become a national slogan. "As a result," he said, "the small investor as well as the man of means is turning to building and loan associations."

LIQUOR RAIDS ARE MADE AT MT. VICTORY

While Pennell Conducts Examination at Kenton.

Other than the statement that R. J Pennell, deputy prohibition commissioner, has not yet made a report regarding his examination of witness here last Monday, there was no word today from Ohio prohibition enforcement commissioner's office in Columbus on the Hardin county situation.

It is understood at the office, however, that Mr. Pennell had not entirely completed his examination here, looking into reported violations of the Crabbe act in Mt. Victory.

A report filed at the office of the state dry commissioner in Columbus shows that a deputy commissioner investigated reported liquor law violations in the village of Mt. Victory on Monday, July 25, while the examination was being conducted in Kenton, and that several places were raided. It was stated that because of the excitement incident to the holding of the examinations here and issuance of subpoenas for nearly thirty witnesses from Mt. Victory alleged illegal liquor trafficking operations had been shut off and the investigation was not completed at that time.—Kenton News-Republican.

KLINES ASK SUSPENSION OF COGNOVIT JUDGMENT

Alleging Note to Stockyards Is Signed Through Threats.

COZAD DIVORCE CASE IS DISMSSED TODAY

Prosecutor Blocks Payment of $2,500 for County Home Improvement.

Petition for suspension of judgment on a cognovit note taken by the Marion Union Stockyards company in the common pleas court January 8 was filed in the common pleas court Tuesday afternoon by L. C. Kline and Dot L. Kline, through Lippincott & Lippincott, of Lima. The petitioners allege the note was signed because of threats of criminal prosecution against them.

The petition states judgment for $418.65 was taken on the cognovit note by the stockyards company without any notice or summons being made on the petitioners. Following this judgment, they state the lands of Dot L. Kline, in Allen county, were levid against as well as the personal property of both of them.

Shortly before the note was executed, the petition states L. C. Kline was acting under the direction of the company purchasing registered Holstein cows at a cost of $13,415. The petition states this amount was paid by the company and the cows shipped to the company in Marion.

After the stock was unloaded, Kline alleges certain members of the company came to him with threats of criminal prosecution and demanded that he repay the company amounts expended for feed and care for the stock for four days while in transit and while the animals were in the company's yards at Marion the bill amounting to $407. He claims that as a part of such threats he was taken to the office of a member of the company and required to sign the note and secure the signature of his wife.

The Klines were former teachers in the Harding High school.

Reconciliation Is Effected.

The divorce suit of Clara A. Cozad against Oliver L. Cozad was settled by agreement of the parties in the common pleas court this morning and the costs paid. The case was set for hearing Monday morning, but a reconciliation was effected before the case was called.

Set Up General Denial.

Answers of Dayton Blue and Grace Buta were filed in the common pleas court Wednesday afternoon in the suit of Annadelle Thibaut to set aside the will of Anna G. Salmon. The answers were filed through Justice, Young & Mouser.

Both answering defendants admit they are legatees of the will, set up a general denial of allegations and ask dismissal of the petition.

Prosecutor Blocks Payment.

A temporary injunction restraining the county auditor and treasurer from paying the United Electric Supply company and the Columbus, Delaware & Marion Electric company any money for electrical work at the Marion County home was granted in the common pleas court this morning on petition of Fred W. Werner, as prosecuting attorney.

Prosecuting Attorney Warner's petition sets forth that June 23 the commissioners passed a resolution authorizing the United Electric Supply company and the Columbus, Delaware & Marion Electric company to install, by force account, certain electric poles, wires and other electrical apparatus at the Marion County home for $2,500, "which pretended contract is in contravention of the laws and statutes of the state of Ohio." The prosecutor charges the contract was entered into without advertising for bids, without submitting the matter to the public for competitive bidding, that the contract was not awarded to the lowest and best bidder for the work and that it amounted to an expenditure of more than $200.

Prosecutor Warner further charges the commissioners were wholly without authority of law to execute such a contract and that the contract was not called to his attention or approved by him. He also states the auditor never certified to the commissioners that there was sufficient money in the proper fund before the contract was entered into and states the contract is wholly illegal. He says the commissioners have threatened to allow bills for the payment of the agreement and that if the money is paid it will be misapplied and illegally drawn from the treasury. He also says that unless an injunction is allowed the taxpayers will have no relief.

The prosecutor asks that the auditor and treasurer be restrained from paying the two companies any amount whatsoever for the work and that on final hearing the injunction be made permanent.

Monroe-Houghton Suit Settled.

The suit of Howard E. Monroe against the Houghton Manufacturing company was settled without record and the costs paid in the common pleas court today. Monroe sued for $750 alleged due him as salary.

When Motoring on Davids Street Last Night.

Mrs. George W. Hinamon, of Bain avenue, received a deep cut in the middle of the forehead, requiring eight stitches to close, Wednesday evening about 9:30 o'clock when Mr. Hinamon drove his automobile over the curb on Davids street to avoid a collision with another car, and it struck a tree. She was taken to the city hospital

Mrs. Hinamon was injured by being thrown against the windshield and Mr. Hinamon was bruised across the chest by being thrown against the steering wheel. The car was damaged.

Mr. and Mrs. Hinamon in company with Mr. and Mrs. Harry S. Elliott, of Bellefontaine avenue, had been out riding and the Hinamons had just left Mr. and Mrs. Elliott at their home and were returning to their own home. While driving on Davids street two men, in another car, came up from the rear and, in going around them, caught the side of their car. To get out of the way, Mr. Hinamon turned into the curb.

Gets Suspended Sentence.

William Partlow, arrested at Fulton Wednesday on a non-support charge preferred by his wife, was found guilty in Justice G. Farr Earle's court this morning and given a suspended sentence of ninety days in the Dayton workhouse. The sentence was suspended providing he pays four dollars a week toward the support of his eight-months old child. Mrs. Ethel Partlow, the wife, who is not seventeen years of age, was cited in the juvenile court as a delinquent.

Plans for an overnight hike next Tuesday evening were made at the meeting of troop No. 7, Boy Scouts, Wednesday evening, in St. Mary's school hall. Fifteen members have signed up for camp and there is still room for about fifteen more.

GOVERNMENT IS COMMITTED

"2—During the peace conference in Paris, the representatives of Great Britain, France and the United States agreed to recommend to their respective governments to take in satisfaction of their advances made to Belgium prior to November 11, 1918, German reparation bonds of a special issue of bearer bonds maturing May 1, 1926, to be made under the treaty of Versailles and this recommendation was communicated by the president February 22, 1921. No action has been taken thereon.

"Subsequently the principal European powers and Germany, in fixing the amount of the indemnity to be paid by Germany and the bonds to be issued in connection therewith, provided for an issue of what are designated as series, A, bonds, which should include the bearer bonds just mentioned. Whether what has been done will make this matter a subject for further consideration, I can not say.

"3—I would like to avail myself of the present opportunity to clear up the matter about which there seems to be so much apprehension and that is to the power given to act to accept bonds of some country other than the debtor country. So far as concerns the principal debtors' power which together owes without accrued interest over $9,000,000,000, there is no intention or thought of payment in bonds other than those of the debtor country.

"The authority now asked, however, covers debts owing to us by Czecho-Slovakia, Russia, Serbia, Poland and a large number of other countries. Their resources and their ability to pay differ widely and the conditions which will have to be dealt with can not now be foreseen. The situation which confronts the treasury is exceedingly complex."

In Occupied Zone.

Washington, July 28.—Secretary of War Weeks, today, reported to the senate that there is a total of 13,795 American troops in the occupied zone of Germany. The total cost of the occupation for American troops from December 1918 to April 30, 1921, is $275,324,000. This sum is ultimately to be paid by Germany, who now owes the United States on this account $240,744,311.

Report Delayed.

Washington, July 28.—Attorney General Daugherty will not render a report on the legal aspects of a proclamation of peace with Germany to the president for at least two weeks, he announced this afternoon.

Next to Recognition.

Washington, July 28.—Although the United States has not formally recognized Afghanistan, it was stated officially, today, that this government expects that other nations will look upon the action of Secretary of States Hughes in receiving Mohamed Wali Khan and the Afghanistan mission, as tantamount to recognition. M. Khan presented credentials as minister to the United States and it is understood in official circles that this constitutes recognition.

early today.

Len Small, under indictment on charges involving misuse of $2,500,000 in state interest funds, dropped from sight, late yesterday, when his legal advisers reported him leaving Chicago. His whereabouts, early today, were unknown.

Reports from Kankakee, his home town, declared he had not arrived there, while employes at the governor's mansion here said he had not returned to Springfield.

Three warrants for his arrest on the "fund" charges were held meanwhile by Sheriff Henry Mester, who was awaiting reply from the governor to his offer for a "conditional surrender."

The legal forces of Sangamon county were preparing to wage a bitter fight against any attempt of the governor to evade trial through technical processes of the law. It was announced that State's Attorney Mortimer would oppose a habeas corpus proceeding or a writ for change of venue from Sangamon county. Mortimer, in effect, flatly challenged the governor to test his case before any tribunal.

"No man can evade the responsibility of a criminal act in his county," said Mortimer. "The man who believes that he can do so is poorly advised."

The governor's two principal legal weapons are the habeas corpus proceeding and a writ for a change of venue from this county. Use or either, according to Mortimer, will be fought through every court. Both would compel a test of the governor's case, it was stated.

Move Anticipated.

The state's attorney, anticipating a habeas corpus proceeding in Chicago, yesterday, refused to permit Small's surrender in that city. The Governor's arrest within Sangamon county, it is contended, would compel his attorneys to bring the habeas corpus proceedings before the court of appeals for the Springfield district. He must, however, submit to arrest.

If he surrenders himself to the authorities, he will be immediately released under $50,000 bonds or on his own recognizance. The habeas corpus proceeding, it was pointed out, will be then brought to test the validity of the governor's technical arrest, although its common usage is to obtain the physical release of a prisoner.

This action, it was stated, would involve a new angle of the law itself and might result in a long drawn out legal battle over technicalities involving a question of the court's jurisdiction. The proposed suing for a writ of change of venue, it was stated, involves the filing of affidavits by the governor showing that the sentiment of Sangamon county is overwhelmingly prejudiced against him, thus preventing a fair trial. The court must also be shown to be prejudiced.

The governor, at an early hour today, had not replied to the request of Sheriff Mester that he submit himself to service of the warrants held here against him.

"I am still awaiting a reply from the governor to my offer that he could name his own conditions of surrender," said Mester. "I will do nothing until I hear from him."

famine area to Baku, in the Caucasus.

The German movement to succor Russia has resulted in a political feud in Berlin. The Socialists demand that the aid be non-partisan and purely humanitarian. On the other hand, the Communists are agitating in favor of capitalizing the movement of political advantages. Both factions are trying to secure control of the succoring movement among the labor unions.

Are Exaggerated.

London, July 2.—Press reports of famine conditions in Russia have been greatly exaggerated, Premier Lloyd George stated in the house of commons today, in reply to inquiries from members.

The British government, he added, has received no request for assistance.

To Secure Help.

Copenhagen, July 28.—In order to obtain help abroad, Lenine is considering the advisability of conditionally recognizing Russia's public debt, the newspaper, Politiken, stated today. If recognized, interest payments would begin on Russian government bonds in 1925. The newspaper did not give the source of its information.

MAN INVENTS WAY TO SETTLE BELT ARGUMENT

Read This, Men, for It is Really Entertaining.

Men, it's here at last—the solution and the end of the suspender-belt controversy that's been raging for, lo, these many years!

L. B. Moats, No. 212 LaFayette street, Niles, has unscrewed the inscrutable, neighbors say, in settling the question that has caused those of the male persuasion to engage in bitter controversy ever since Cain suspended his fig-leaf by a grapevine thrown over his shoulder and Abel hitched his nether covering up with a thong of goat's hide tied 'round his tummy.

"A man can't keep his pants up with a belt," proclaims the redoubtable Moats. "Of course, he may manage to hide his nakedness if he keeps his belt strapped tightly around his gizzard. What I mean is you can't keep your pants up with a belt and really enjoy life at the same time for looking to see whether you've still got your pants on.

"If you haven't lost them, you have to be hitchin' 'em up every whipstitch or else tryin' to persuade your shirt to keep its place like a respectable shirt tail ought, instead of flyin' in the breeze like the postoffice flag.

"Nonsense!" says Moats. "A belt is the contraption of the devil—nothing less. The good, old gallus for me, you bet!"

The chief objection to the gallus has always been its unsightliness. Young bladen especially discarded it for this reason. But Moats has overcome all objections.

Here is how. He has invented a shirt-vest. He takes any desired shirt material and out of it he fashions a garment just like a vest except that it has a high neck and neckband to which can be fastened the usual linen collar. He puts his suspenders on over—sh-h-h!—his undershirt his shirt-vest on over his suspenders and voila!—there he is cool and comfortable, no troublesome shirt tail to fuss with, plenty of ventilation, no danger of losing his trousers, and neat and trig looking as even a dandy could wish.

Moats says he's going to patent his invention interest some one with capital in it, and then devote himself to the manufacture of this great boon to the male of the species.

MARION DAILY STARS TO PLAY COLUMBUS MENDALS

Game Will Be Staged Here Sunday Afternoon.

The desire of many local baseball fans to see the Columbus Mendels return here, will be filled Sunday, when the aggregation of Columbus stars will meet the Marion Daily Star team, at Lincoln park. The Mendel team opened the season here and defeated the locals five to one, but the local team went in without having any signals or team practice.

The Daily Stars are now going in fine form and are confident that they can take the measure of the Mendels. First Baseman Near, who was out of the game here on account of a bad ankle, is to be at his post, and in addition the visiting team will probably have the services of Chaffin and Grady, both of whom have had league experience. The Columbus team will use the same line-up here as they will use when they meet the New York Americans at Neil park, August 11. The game will be called promptly at 2:30 o'clock, and a record crowd is expected.

Q—What sort of language should the motion picture scenario writer use?

A—Photoplay writers should think and write in terms of pictures. Remember that everything you write will have to be interpreted by means of action in pictures. Select words that will bring forth visions of pictures. Shun adjectives and descriptive words and write in action language. Remember that the words of action are verbs.

Says Home Shortage Will Be Alleviated

"HOOSIANS need not worry about a home shortage if they will only stop making wild-cat investments and place their savings in financial institutions of recognized stability," according to John W. Prugh, the new state inspector of building and loan institutions.

Prugh declares the investing public is through taking chances and that "safety first" again has become a national slogan. "As a result," he said, "the small investor as well as the man of means is turning to building and loan associations."

LIQUOR RAIDS ARE MADE AT MT. VICTORY

While Pennell Conducts Examination at Kenton.

Other than the statement that R. J. Pennell, deputy prohibition commissioner, has not yet made a report regarding his examination of witness here last Monday, there was no word today from Ohio prohibition enforcement commissioner's office in Columbus on the Hardin county situation.

It is understood at the office, however, that Mr. Pennell had not entirely completed his examination here, looking into reported violations of the Crabbe act in Mt. Victory.

A report filed at the office of the state dry commissioner in Columbus shows that a deputy commissioner investigated reported liquor law violations in the village of Mt. Victory on Monday, July 25, while the examination was being conducted in Kenton, and that several places were raided. It was stated that because of the excitement incident to the holding of the examinations here and issuance of subpoenas for nearly thirty witnesses from Mt. Victory alleged illegal liquor trafficking operations had been shut off and the investigation was not completed at that time.—Kenton News-Republican.
